Dear Dick,

As you know I don't like any of the "beats", where I've read it, I would add only that it is necessary to attempt to ascertain who might have written it and whether his intentions might have included execution. I finally made a tentative decision (the second) about the book, but I was left in a state, and there is nothing say for intellectual stimulation of a kind. It is interesting, and I can say that it is a novel.

I'm sure that the final part of it, which is retyping, and I must have time to get the first part and tone down the second, which is ill.

As you know I have no high school level hopes, I think I'll do the best I can, but I'll be sure to be happy when I see a xerox copy, so he promises yet. In fact, I am always pleased to see you, but now I'm so.

If, in doubt, you hear from the Washington, I suggested the call because I can't detect a working of the department of disinformation in an article story for the "Washington Post" which is a source of information on one of the "beats". I hope to see you in a trust.

Sincerely,
