

ethnocentrism and try to imagine how a black person might look at what's happening.

We look at each of these police attacks as a unique case, just as we look at Song My as an "isolated incident." It doesn't occur to us that a black man might see a pattern in what's going on.

He will remember the Marcus Garvey liberation movement of the 1920s and the Black Muslim movement of the 1950s, both important and promising efforts at the political organization of the urban black poor by blacks themselves without hidden white financial support and control. Both movements were smashed by the white government.

GUNS

We whites buy the Los Angeles police department's explanation of the attack the other day on the grounds that the Panthers in the apartment had guns and fought back.

A black person might remember a boundary attack launched by the LAPD in 1965 against the Honorable Elijah Muhammad's temple there. The assault, also near dawn, included firing nobody knows how many rounds of machine-gun ammunition in the place. When it was over, no guns were found.

You don't have to be a fanatic or a Communist or an irresponsible militant to conclude that if the police are going to attack you with machine guns, when you're unarmed, you'd do as well to try to defend yourself.

In fact, a non-white person might decide, after comparing the situation with Los Angeles, that if the guns did save anybody's lives.

Communists will read this and say the writer is encouraging people to pick up guns and shoot policemen. He is not. He is an absolutely explicit opponent of murdering policemen as he is against murdering of anybody else. He is saying that if you are in a jam, what you can do is to try to get out of it. There is no way you can count on the fact men would do anything.

We whites do white people, when we're in a serious jam, we get ourselves a lawyer, we go to court and we sue. Black people don't have mon-
