The drawings are for Black children and the police are depicted as skin-topped pigs.

The booklet is called "The Black Panther Coloring Book."

It has been distributed to schools and day-care centers in San Francisco and other cities.

San Francisco police Inspector Ben Baschert, who testified before a Senate subcommittee on the Panther coloring book, said the drawings are "a very good example of the kind of propaganda that the Black Panther Party is capable of producing."

Books with breakfast

Lehman said the coloring books were being distributed along with free breakfasts in at least three locations: the Sacred Heart Catholic Church, South Ridge Methodist Church, and the Jewish Smith Elementary School.

At the school, he said, Sub-committee youngsters were fed out by Black Panther members; their breakfast for "close-order drill" around the school grounds.

"Here it is," Mundi said, "Color him dead. This is a blueprint for the murder of policemen if the hands of children."

When you teach murder in the basement of our churches, you begin to see where some of the fault lies," Father Boyle, who gave the go-ahead for the breakfast program, told United Press International in San Francisco that he put a stop to distribution of the coloring books as soon as he learned of it.

Medicaid Boycott Claimed at 60%

NEW YORK, June 24 (UPI) — A representative of drug-gists boycotting Medicaid claimed Monday that 60 percent of pharmacies in New York City and downstate counties were refusing to fill prescriptions under the program.

A random check of city pharmacies by the New York City Health Department found that slightly less than half of drugists questioned said they were boycotting the program.

The pharmacists began the boycott Monday to protest a state cutback in drug prices they can charge Medicaid recipients.
