McClellan Sets Hearing On Political Terrorists

Sen. John L. McClellan, declaring political terrorists have begun guerilla warfare on a national scale, announced Sunday the opening of hearings into bombings that have occurred this year. The Arkansas Democrat said testimony at the hearing beginning Wednesday is expected to show bombings have become daily occurrences and represent a "serious threat to the nation's safety and security."

McClellan said in a statement that witnesses will detail the number and types of bombings, testify on the sale, theft and control of explosive devices and identify the sources and distribution of material giving instructions in the making and use of explosives and fire bombs.

Recently McClellan was quoted as saying his Senate Investigations subcommittee requested the Internal Revenue Service detail in charge of explosive controls to attempt to cull the files of libraries to learn the identities of persons checking out books on explosives.
