

Bremer Likely to Stay in State Penitentiary

Arthur H. Bremer probably will remain at the Maryland State Penitentiary in Baltimore where he has been since a Prince George's jury convicted him Aug. 4 of shooting Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace and three other persons.

The possibility still exists that Bremer may be sent to the state's Patuxent Institution for defective delinquents in Jessup, Md. Assistant Attorney General H. Edgar Lantz said yesterday that a court could send Bremer to Patuxent for evaluation if it is requested by attorneys in the case or by the State Department of Corrections.

Lantz said he knew of no plans in the Department of Corrections to request sending Bremer to Patuxent and that Bremer probably will be assigned to the penitentiary.

Bremer, who was sentenced to 30 years, could be eligible for parole in 1971. Bremer was shot out of the shooting at a campaign rally but officials have not decided whether they will bring Bremer to trial.

The penitentiary in Baltimore is the state's maximum security institution.

Grams said that Bremer was moved out of his specially guarded cell in the penitentiary's hospital wing yesterday and put in the same area with other prisoners in the reception and diagnostic wing.

"There's no special arrangements of any kind," said Grams. "He'll be eating his meals with other inmates and be treated in every way the same as every inmate."

Grams said Bremer will be in the reception center another week to 10 days before a final decision is made whether to keep him in the penitentiary or to send him to one of the state's other penal institutions.

Bremer had been in the hospital since Aug. 4 for his own protection, according to Grams. He had refused to cooperate with psychiatrists who tried to interview him there.

Bremer's eye out of the hospital was made without incident, Grams said.

Bremer's move out of the Prince George's County Circuit Court on charges of attempted murder came after a trial in which psychiatrists for the defense characterized the blond, former Milwaukee busboy as a psychotic who shot Wallace in a schizophrenic frenzy. The jury rejected his insanity defense.

Patuxent is the institution where the state sends prisoners with criminal personalities who have been found legally sane.

The institution has been questioned recently in a series of legal actions and its future is uncertain. The Supreme Court has ruled that inmates who refuse to cooperate with psychiatrists cannot be held at Patuxent for longer than the sentence they received for committing a crime.

Js, LF, When I read tonight in this a.m.'s Post that Bremer is out of isolation 8/24/72 and to be "treated like any other prisoner" including mixing, the night after I read what is not withheld of what is found of his diary, I am filled with misgivings. One can't read that without knowing he is dangerously sick. Without his act he is clearly both ~~is~~ capable of violence and anxious for his own death as long as it is accompanied by significant attention. He expected it following an attempted assassination and feared only that he'd not be killed but captured and languish in jail. Can you think of a better combination to make this not-new thought and destiny attractive? I am not urging either of you to want the diary or to take the time to read it. I report a misgiving I can't avoid and a condition not required under law and accepted practise. There is a state institution to which he can be sent on motion, without the existing diagnoses of mental illness. But the state and federal govts won't make that little gesture toward acknowledging the insanity they have long creached is the only explanation of all the assassinations. They are also sick.
