

A revealing film of JFK's assassination

DALLAS (AP) — Greatly enlarged frames of a movie film taken the day President John F. Kennedy was assassinated may show two persons in a sixth-floor window of the Texas School Book Depository, a photo analyst hired by the Dallas Morning News said yesterday.

In a copyright story, the Morning News said it recently obtained the color film, taken and copyrighted by amateur photographer Charles L. Bronson of Ada, Okla., and commissioned photo analyst Robert J. Groden to analyze that portion of the film showing the sixth floor of the depository.

The paper said Groden, of Hope Lawn, N.J., worked with prints from the film, trying to detect movement in the window from which the Warren Commission concluded that Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone, shot Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963. Groden has served as a consultant on photographic evidence for the House assassinations committee.

Nine of the black and white photographs published by the Morning News were enlarged 100 times. The photos show a faint grey mottling in two of the sixth-floor windows.

"There is another person moving in the next set of windows," Groden said. "He (the figure) is wearing a bright red shirt. Another figure appears to be wearing brownish-tannish or olive (shirt). It's difficult to tell because the windows are dirty. I can make out figures moving simultaneously in both sets of windows."

"A man appears to be wearing a bright red shirt," he added. "From all the descriptions of Oswald and the shirt he was arrested in was dark brown."

The newspaper said "the light-colored area in the left window in the upper portion of each frame seems to change throughout the film — apparently as would a person walking to or from the window."

John Sigalas, a Dallas lawyer acting for the man who took the photos, said copies of the film would not be made available beyond the one-time usage in the Morning News until a public showing tomorrow or Tuesday.
