

Payne-family get proof of death from medical examiner. They need for legalities, even though they have buried the man they have reason to believe or they have been told is Che. To others it can be refused properly, perhaps should be. But they want full and intimate details- and they also want other details simply because they want to know and believe they are entitled to, like mattery or battery pieces in need, etc. Also because the e is at least the inference he was engaged in violation of the law.
