Dear Miss B,

Sorry, I didn't know you didn't have Oswald in New Orleans. One going today, with several flyers. I thought you'd gotten that book when it came out.

Matter of fact, I had not seen the picture. You are right about its meaning. I did see a picture from the expressway over and under the 3 Underpass that is interesting, though.

I'm very glad you sent me that Scott clipping. I have now seen two other forms of the same thing. Not one is complete in itself. I'd like any other you may come across. The same thing had been fed to Butler, with whom I had been scheduled to have a debate on the Fyne radio show. It was, rather, a gang up on which I lost my cool and was thereby made that ineffectual.

Please keep an eye out for anything on the British eminence, John Sparrow, who suddenly appears with a book on Today, having flown the Atlantic before the book is on sale, rather suspicious. I believe the book is calculated to serve only as an excuse for him to get wide radio and TV attention, in support of the fiction. I'd like any clippings you come across, please

If I may ask a favor: last time I photocopied what you had sent to give it to another, many of the letters came out solid. Would you please brush the typewriter keys? A simple, inexpensive but effective device is an old toothbrush.

Since Penn first told me about Weatherford I've heard nothing. I presume Craigs' knowledge need not come from his having seen W there. However, it is true that I have not seen pictures showing the horde assailing the fence. But could that not have come instants later than the pictures I have seen?

Hurriedly,
