

Dear Ed, Thanks for Krasner's "Dear James McCord..." In diluting insanity with the utterly irrelevant Krasner improves. There! I've been trying hard and at last I have been able to pay him a kind of complement... You do not identify the college whose Spring Semester includes in the Humanities "Political Conspiracy and Assassinations." It was with the letter in which you say of "ee, who is listed that "She has prophetic moments," what was said of Hitler with no less relevance and accuracy. That she is well-intentioned I know. That she has done no good and much harm I also know. Was the line, you had it in quotes, from her? "I am a professor now on conspiracies." Wasn't she always? We have such friends enemies are de trop. What we have lacked and have needed since Garrison came along is enemies. They did us some good and gave us some possibilities. Thanks, WH 2/26/74

LOYALIST  COLLEGE OF APPLIED ARTS AND TECHNOLOGY

Dear Harold,

Mae reports that The Hearst Kidnapping was "a CIA operation".

"I am a professor now on conspiracies".

I like Mae. She has prophetic moments. But she mumbles too often lapses into fantasies of an Auntie Maud.

Sally, N.G., at Salamallia appears cautious by comparison.

SPRING SEMESTER

 HUMANITIES 195 • 2:10 • 4:00-WED. • LF102

An examination of political assassinations and related activities, mainly contemporary -- ranging from Dallas to Watergate -- but also historical and cross-cultural. A look at the web of social and political interaction to see assassinations in the context of the nature and stakes of modern political power. An attempt to understand the process of opinion formation, the unfolding of truth and illusion, and their impact on the lives of citizens.

Lectures by Mae Brussell, noted researcher in contemporary assassinations, David Yamada, Political Science instructor, and Ray Fabrizio, English instructor.
