Dear Mr. Craig,

I've delayed responding to your Feb 5 hoping to find more time than I now have but going over the proofs of NEVER AGAIN! is taking much more time than I expected and I have to rush that. Planned pub date in April. Dal has already ordered a copy from The Last Hurrah Bookstore. (Good people those two.)

My copy of the Marchetti book has disappeared. As my wife would say, and would be right most of the time, loaned to someone who did not return it. So I cannot now check that. But in reading Summers and what he attributes to Hemming, as usually is the case, Hemming is not a dependable source. I know him. The way he uses "crypto" in the Summers pages you were so kind and tent tells me he knows nothing about it.

And that is bull about the socializing with the U-2 people. They were to themselves and socializing was prevented.

I'm aware of that phone call but believing I could get nowhere with it, did no work on it. I've not heard of anything definitive.

I think Hurt was connected with Army intelligence.

I think also that what I remember of it is some of what Fensterwald told me.

I've learned also not to take Summers without confirmation.

The odd thing is that Oswald really never had any more money that was ever visible, including to Marina.

Sorry I've not time for more and can't now search files.

Best wishes,

Harold Weisberg

Dear Mr. Weisberg,

Thank you for your kind letter of 14 January 1995. Regarding Nags Head as the HQ for a Naval Intelligence operation involving Lee Harvey Oswald: This subject was addressed by Anthony Summers in an interview with former CIA officer Victor Marchetti, who held the position of Executive Assistant to the Deputy Director from 1955 to 1969. Marchetti published a book entitled The CIA and the Cult of Intelligence which was heavily censored at time of publication.

It is detailed in Summer's book Conspiracy, later reissued as The Kennedy Conspiracy. The 9th chapter is "Cracks in the Canvas", specifically pages 142 to 145. Marchetti detailed information on a phoney defector's program run out of Nags Head in which poor, disenchanted Americans faked defection to the USSR.

While detained in the Dallas jail, Oswald made 3 calls- At 4 and 8 pm, calls to Ruth Payne, at 10:45 pm, a call to a North Carolina number in Raleigh, North Carolina. The Assassinations subcommittee obtained the number from the secretary in the Dallas jail switchboard. It was traced to a Mr. Hurt. I have photocopied and enclosed the relevant pages in this letter.

According to Mr. Summer's Sources and Notes, the episode was relayed to Bernard Fensterwald, and was addressed by the Subcommittee. It was reported in the Raleigh Spectator paper and the Raleigh News and Observer the week of July 17 to 24, July 1980. (also attached)

As you have noted, the kind of lifestyle Oswald had could not be maintained on the pittance he earned. He was moonlighting on the side. I am reminded of the comment he made to the proprietor of the garage in New Orleans when he quit working at the Reilly Coffee Company, Adrian Alba. "I have found my pot of gold at the end of the rainbow." This was late summer (August?) in 1963. (Summers, pgs 282-3, interview with Alba in 1978)

Best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

Don Craig
