Dear Mr. Weisberg,

Thought you might be interested in these parodies I wrote in the wake of the first Manchester installment. I had to take some liberties with the Apostle's Creed, but I think the spirit has been preserved.

I hope Ruby's death and the Manchester articles will keep the reopening fires going. Do you know of any bills introduced yet in Congress to this regard? Would like to know of something specific, so I do something in support of it.

Now that I think of it, too bad, I couldn't have gotten the word "whitewash" in the creed somewhere. The Whitewasher's Creed.

Hope your volume III is progressing well. Can't wait to see it. Finally finished Cook's book on the FBI. It is certainly an eye-opener, but I have reservations on the Remington case. Surely a half-way devoted wife could have kept from ratting on her husband (especially if it was lies) in spite of some hunger pangs. I don't think he gives the whole picture in this instance. Note the irony that Remington was killed exactly nine years to the day before JFK, an ironic prelude, especially since both were victims of the FBI, directly or indirectly.

Best of luck with current and future sales.

Sincerely,

Bruce Cossaboom
