J.B.S. Ends 'Instant Analysis' of Presidents'

By ALBIN KREBS

The Columbia Broadcasting networks. System will cease immediately the practice of providing so-called "instant analysis" follow ing Presidential speeches carzing kins. al,

The major policy change was made public in a one-paragraph footnote tacked on to a statement by William S. Paley, board chairman of C.B.S. Inc. The statement said C.B.S. would henceforth schedule special programs for opposing views, usuwithin a week after a President has made a speech with which there might be "significant national disagreement."

A spokesman for the broadvised the new policy, in con-sultation with others, including top C. B. S. News executives.

In practice, this will mean that when a President makes a speech at, say 9 P.M., C.B.S.

network program, "The Morn-land radio networks," ing News," at 7 A.M. the fol-labout 500 stations are ated.

in Washington is analysis and made a practice of providing welcomed the rebuttals commentary, change.

"I don't mind it because I've c.B.S. newsmen welcomed the policy on presenting contrasting views, but there was widespread unhappiness with the new prohibition of analysis of Presidential speeches impediately after their delivery. The promoted the mediately after their delivery. The federal Communications what those advantages, what mediately after their delivery iournalism. We're not being fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments back-to-back to those of Eric Sevareid on the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments are commented to the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments are commented to the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments are commented to the fair to ourselves or our audiposing comments are commented to t always been a little uncom-

Spokesmen for the American all programing. casting system said yesterday Broadcasting Company and the that Mr. Paley "personally devised the new policy, in conpany said that those networks would continue to offer analy sis following Presidential speeches when they felt it was warranted.

In his statement announcing C.B.S.'s intention to provide time for opponents' responses to some Presidential speeches, for some Presidential specular was to provide "fair and balanced coverage of public issues."

"Recent Presidents," he said,

"Recent Presidents," he said,
"have conceived as one of the main functions of he executive the focusing of national attention on public issues. To accomplish this, they have turned more and more to broadcasting as a means of direct access to the people. This in turn has increased the need for broadcasting to develop new avenues to provide a broad spectrum of significant views and a multiplicity of representative voices on public issues."

voices on public issues."

Under the new policy, whenever a President, on radio or TV, speaks on "matters on major policy concerning which there is significant national disagreement," C.B.S. will present a broadcast of other viewpoints. C.B.S. News will determine in each case the length, format and people for rebuttal format and people for rebuttal broadcasts. The broadcasts will be scheduled as soon as practicable, generally no later than one week after the President speaks.

ried on its television and radio networks.

News will not present an analysis of it until its next regular the broadcasting system's TV network program, "The Mornnetwork program program, "The Morn They will be presented on Spokesmen for the American correspondents apparently were furious over the new rule. Eric Sevareid, whose chief duty rebuttals to Presidential speeches when, in their judgment, rebuttals were war-ranted. There will be no change in those policies, the spokes-

One correspondent called the change "catastrophic."

Mr. Paley was unavailable for comment regarding reports that the new policy on "instant analysis" represented, at least in part, a response to pressure from C. B. S.-affiliated stations. Affiliates of the Columbia Broadcasting System and of the other networks were said to have been urging an end to "instant analysis" ever since 1969, when Vice President Agnew's line are in part, a speech condemning network news practices.

A spokesman for the broad
A spokesman for the broad-

•1