Disclosure Would Help Russia, Hill Told

Colby Firm on Fund Secrecy

By William Greider
Washington Post Staff Writer Director William E. Colby of the Central Intelligence agency pleaded with congressalonal investigators, yesterday not to force public exposure of any CIA budget figures, lest that information help the Rus-mans.

In return, one congressman accused Colby of playing God" with classified information and another suggested that the GIA wants to keep its budget secret from the American taxpayers rather than the Someta budget secret from the American taxpayers rather than the Soviets.

Coby appeared before the House intelligence committee, which is reviewing the secret fiscal affairs of the federal governments various intelligence agencies, programs said to cost billions of dollars though the official budget to tal has never been disclosed.

The CIA director, who has tal has never been disclosed.

The CIA director, who has everall responsibility for coordinating intelligence budgets and programs with other agencies, warned that "the agency's budget must be kept secret and a revealing it would inevitably weaken our intelligence."

Even if an overall total figure was the only information

Even if an overall total figure was the only information made public, that would still be helpful to U.S. adversaries, Colby said because they could chart trends over a period of years and derive valuable conclusions about the secret directions of American spying, "Moreover," Colby said, "once the budget total was revealed, the demand for details

"Moreover," Colby said,
"once the budget total was revealed, the demand for details probably would grow. What does it include? What does it weeklude? Why did t go up?

See COLBY, A5, Col. 1

y: "Intelligence . . will not work if exposed."

۲.

COLBY, From A1

Why did R go down? Is worth it? How does it wart tions, even revelations of facts not in themselves particularly sensitive but which would gradually reduce the unknown to a smaller and smaller part graduaty reduce the inkown to a smaller and smaller part of the total permitting foreign intelligence services to concentrate their afforts in the areas where we would least like to attract their attention."

least like to attract them.

Rep., Otis (Pike) (O-N.Y.), among others, was not impressed by Colby's defense of total secrecy. The committee chairman noted that the Soviet Union already massive lot about American strailvence programs because the gence programs because the United States is an open soci-

United States is an open society. Colby agreed. "In the final anaylis."
Pike said, "the people, 160 Pike said, "the payers was payers."
Colby argued that socrecy, if secrety is secret for an affective. Igner, mental, 180 I o a such as secret young or secret. such as secret voting of semet grand hury sessions. 'Intelligence is such a proc-ess," he said "It is important to our country and it will not work if it is exposed."

Pike noted that only 38 sen ators and representatives among the 535 members of Congress are told about the congress are roll about the secret budgets. Thus, 93 per cent of the Congress is in the dark The money is hidden in 20 categories of Defense De-partment spending and one State Department account. Pike suggested to Colby that "you fear that the secret you have would become known to the public if all members of Congress knew them."

"I do so fear," Colby replied. はりずけ

That prompted an angry blast from Rep. Ronald V. Dellums (D-Calif.) who asked: "What makes you the person who decided he can play God?"

"Mr. Dellums, I am not play ing God," Colby said. "I am only enforcing the laws which the Congress passed to protect those secrets needed to pre-serve that free society which you and I both want."

Dellums said the CIA director is putting himself above elected representatives and is using "National security" as a shield just as the Nixon White House did in the Watergate.

On the subject of assassina-tions, Colby reiterated his pos-ition that he is opposed to government-sponsored assassina-tion of foreign leaders though he said he would have sup-ported such asn effort, aimed at Hitler in World War II. Some committee members were reluctant to go into executive session with Colly's because they said their closed meeting last Friday with James Lyan, White House director of management and budget, produced evasive answers and no information.

Lynn repeatedly told the committee in public that he would be happy to answer many questions in private, but Pike said Lynn reneged once the committee met privately with him.

The result could only be described as acutely disappointing. Pike said The committee then voted 6 to 1 to go into closed hearings with Colby, though the chairman was among those who voted against it.