Report on CIA's Financ

Here is the text of the Cabinet committe's report to President Johnson of Central Intelligency Agency support of voluntary organizations, released yesterday by the White House:

Dear Mr. President:

The committee which you appointed on Feb. 15, 1967, has sought, pursuant to your request:

 To review relationships between Government agencies, notably the Central Intelligence Agency, and educational and private voluntary organizations which operate abroad; and

To recommend means to help assure that such organizations can play their proper and vital role abroad.

The committee has held a number of meetings, interviewed dozens of individuals in and out of government, and reviewed thousands of pages of reports. We have surveyed the relevant activities of a number of Federal agencies. And we have reviewed in particular and specific detail the relationship between CIA and each relevant organization.

Our report, supplemented with supporting classified documents, follows.

In the summary, the committee offers two basic recommendations:

1. It should be the policy of the United States Government that no Federal agency shall provide any covert financial assistance or support, direct or indirect, to any of the Nation's educational or private voluntary organizations.

2. The Government should promptly develop and establish a public-private mechanism to provide public funds openly for overseas activities of organizations which are adjudged deserving, in the national interest, of public support.

1: A NEW POLICY

The years immediately after World War II saw a surge of Communist activity in organizations throughout the world. Students, scientists, veterans, w o m e n and professional groups were organized into international bodies which spoke in the cadences, advocated the policies, and furthered the interests of the Communist bloc. Much of this activity was organized, directed, and financed covertly by Communist governments.

American organizations reacted from the first. The young men and women who founded the United States National Student Association, for example, did so precisely to give American youth the capacity to hold their own in the international arena. But the importance of students as a force in international events had yet to become widely understood and NSA found it difficult to attract private support for its international activities. Accordingly, the United States Government, acting through the Central Intelligence Agency, provided support for this overseas work.

We have taken NSA as an example, While no useful purpose would be served by detailing any other CIA programs of assistance to private American voluntary organizations, one fundamental point should be clearly stated: such assistance was given pursuant to National Security Council policies beginning in October, 1951, and with the subsequent concurrence of high-level senior interdepartmental review committees in the last four Administrations. In December, 1960, in a classified report submitted after a year. of study, a public-private Presidential Committee on Information Activities Abroad specifically endorsed both overt and covert programs, including those assisted by CIA.

Nicholas deB. Richard John W. Katzenbach Helms Gardner ... their report released by the President

Our study, undertaken at a later time, discloses new developments which suggest that we should now reexamine these policies. The American public, for example, has become increasingly aware of the importance of the complex forms of international competition between free societies and Communist states. As this awareness has grown, so have potential sources of support for the overseas work of private organizations.

Growth Noted

There is no precise index to these sources, but their increase is suggested by the growth in the number of private foundations from 2220 in 1955 to 18,000 in 1967. Hence it is increasingly possible for organizations like NSA to seek support for overseas activities from open sources. Just as sources of support has increased, so has the number of American groups engaged in overseas work. According to the Agency for International Development, there has been a nine fold increase just among voluntary organizations which participate in technical assistance abroad rising from 24 in 1951 to 220 in 1965. The total of all private American voluntary groups now working overseas may well exceed a thousand.

The number of such organizations which has been assisted covertly is a small fraction of the total. The vast preponderance have had no relationship with the Government or have accepted only open Government funds-which greatly exceed funds supplied covertly.

The work of private American organizations, in a host of fields, has been of great benefit to scores of countries. That benefit must not be impaired by foreign doubts about the independence of these organizations. The committee believes it is essential for the United States to underscore that independence immediately and decisively.

For these reasons, the com-mittee recommends the following:

STATEMENT OF POLICY

No Federal agency shall provide any covert financial assistance or support, direct or indirect, to any of the Nation's educational or private voluntary organiza-tions. This policy specifically applies to all foreign activities of such organizations and it reaffirms present policy with respect to their domestic activities.

Where such support has been given, it will be terminated as quickly as possible without destroying valuable private organizations before they can seek new means of support.*

We believe that, particularly in the light of recent publicity, establishment of a clear policy of this kind is the only way for the Government to carry out two important responsibilities. One is to avoid any implication that governmental assistance, because it is given covertly, is used to affect the policies of private voluntary groups. The second responsibility is to make it plain in all foreign countries that the activities of private American groups abroad are, in fact, private.

The committee has sought carefully to assess the impact of this Statement of Policy on CIA. We have reviewed each relevant porgram of assistance carried out by the Agency in case-by-case detail. As a result of this scrutiny, the committee is satisfied that application of the Statement of Policy will not unduly handicap the Agency in the exercise of its national security responsibilities. Indeed, it should be noted that, starting well before the appearance of recent publicity, CIA had initiated and pursued efforts to disengage from certain of these activities.

The committee also recommends that the implementation of this policy be supervised by the senior interdepartmental review committee which already passes on pro- than through the activity of posed CIA activities and which would review and assist in the process of disengagement."

2: NEW METHODS OF SUPPORT

Basic Problem While our first recommendation seeks to insure the independence of private volun-tary organizations, it does not deal with an underlying problem—how to support the na-tional need for, and the in-trinsic worth of, their efforts abroad.

Anyone who has the slightest familiarity with intellectual or youth groups abroad knows that free institutions continue to be under bitter, continuous attack, some of it carefully organized and wellfinanced, all of it potentially dangerous to this Nation.

It is of the greatest importance to our future and to the future of free institutions everywhere that other nations, especially their young people, private mechanism to provide onstrate the desirability of a know and understand Ameri- public funds openly for over-similar body in the United can viewpoints. There is no seas activities of organizations States, wholly or largely fund-

private American | organizations.

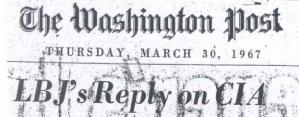

ganizations cannot, without hampering their effectiveness as independent bodies, accept Institute for Cultural Relafunds directly from Government agencies.

Recommendation

The committee therefore ment should promptly develop and establish a public other countries helps to dembetter way to meet this need which are adjudged deserving, ed by the Federal Govern-in the national interest; of public support. Such a mechanism [could Such a mechanism could take various forms: One/prom-ising proposal, advanced by Mr. Eugene Black, calls for a publicly funded but privately administered body patterned on the British Council.

The British Council, estab-lished in 1934, operates in 80 than through the activity of private American organiza-tions. The time has surely come ternational conferences and The time has surely come for the Government to help support such activity in a ma line, open manner of Some progress toward that aim already has been made In recent years a number of Federal agencies have developed contracts, grants and other forms of open assistance to private organizations for overseas activities. This as sistance, however, soes not deal with a major aspect of the problem. A number of the problem. A number of the council for cultural fiela-tions, for example, is entirely sovernment, is entirely sovernment-financed but opgovernment-financed but operates autonomously. The governing body of the Swedish tions consists of both government and private members. This institute receives 75 per cent of its funds from the gov-The committee therefore ernment and the remainder recommends that the Govern- from private contributions. The experience of these and

President Johnson issued this statement in Russenhach committee report: the esponse to the

I have received the report from the committee which appointed on Feb. 15 to review relationships between I appointed on reb. 15 to review relationships between the Central Intelligence Agency and private American voluntary organizations. This committee consisted of Under Secretary of State Nicholas Katzenbach, as chair-man. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare John Gardher and CIA Director Richard Helms. I accept this committee proposed statement of policy and am directing all agencies of the Government to implement it fully to implement it fully.

We will also give serious consideration to the com-inuter's recommendation that the Government should promptly develop and establish a public-private mechanism to provide public funds openly for overseas activities of organizations and the activities of deserving activities actional interest on public support." Col review concrete ways of accomplishing this objective, I am requestion Secretary Rust to serve as chairman of , a special committee which will include representatives a from the Executive, the Congress and the private community.

招告 激 4 String former street pergentia services and on and Cultural Affairs.

Not New to U.S.

United States. Congress estab- however, that, because of the ment. Another approach might lished the Smithsonian Instibe the establishment of a gov- tution, for example, more than ernmental foundation,' per- a century ago as a private haps with links to the existing corporation, under the guard-Federal Inter-Agency Council ianship of Congress, but gov-International Education erned by a mixed public-private Board of Regents.

The committee began a pre-Such a public-private body be the best method of meeting would not be new to the the present need. It is evident.

great range both of existing Government and private philanthropic programs, the refinement of alternatives and selection among them is a task of considerable complexity. Accordingly, we do not believe that this exclusively govern-mental committee is an appropriate forum for the task and we recommend, instead, the appointment of a larger group, including individuals in private life with extensive experience in this field.

- 14

A 25

The basic principle, in any event, is clear. Such a new in-struction would involve government funds. It might well involve Government officials. But a premium must be placed on the lively ement of private burgens and the exercise of private judgments, for to be effective, it would have to have and be precognized to have a high degree of independence.

The prompt creation of such an institution, based on this principle, would fill an important-and never more apparent-national need.

Respectfully,

John W. Gardner, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Richard Helms, Director of Central Intelligence.

Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, Under Secretary of State, Chairman.

Footnotes

*On the basis of our caseby-case review; we "expect that the process of termination can be largely—perhaps entirely—completed by Dec. 31, 1967.

If the Statement of Policy is to be effective, it must be rigorously enforced. In the judgment of this committee, no programs currently, would justify any exception to this policy. At the same time, where the security of the Nation may be at stake, it is impossible for this committee to state categorically now that there will never be a contingency in which overriding national security interests may require an exception—nor would it be executive to enunciate a policy which purported to do so.

ĩ,

We therefore recommend that, in the event of such unusual contingencies, the interdepartmental review committee be permitted to make exceptions to the Statement of Policy, but only where overriding national security interests so require; only on a case-bycase basis; only where open sources of support are shown to be unavaliable, and only when such exceptions receive the specific approval of the Secretaries of State and Defense. In no event should any future exception be approved which involves any educational, philanthropic or cultural organization.

хţċ

ş