Thin "Dicin swind" In trune Snyl

Government merely countersigned one each, under the signatures of the in English—were laid out on the table before the foreign ministers of the fow a curious affair; four separate copies of the agreement—two in Vietnamese, we for that would have implied mutual recognition. respective allies, so their names would not appear together on any single  $c_{\mathrm{opy}}$ Ministers of the Republic of South Vietnam and the Provisional Revolutionary namese counterpart, Nguyen Duy Trinh, signed all of them. The Foreign "parties," but only Secretary of State William Rogers and his North Vict.

roof of the Duc Hotel and toasted the new era with a Bloody Mary. into effect, to the melancholy wail of the city's air-raid system. I stood on the At eight in the morning Saigon time, 28 January 1973, the cease-fire went the first day of the cease-fire was not the one Kissinger and the North Viet. to cable to Saigon all the changes he had made in the text during the last few lighter side. In his haste to conclude the agreement, Kissinger had forgotten namese had actually agreed upon. days of the negotiations. Thus the document Thieu read out to his cabinet on For all its solemnity and import, the advent of peace was not without in

guard | 1

Embasi

Depar; 1975

learned of the oversight: "I'll be goddamned!" It was a fitting prologue to all The normally reticent Elisworth Bunker had only one comment when he

Excepts related to in cit's use & miscar of classification in impulse fundas, sectory of the of it in the status of the status o

story of the

sador

On 27 January the formal signing ceremonies took place in Paris, ly was in a snow-white room, a North Vietnamese prisoner of war who had been beenent, my overriding concern was not the coming peace at all, but a small solitary confinement for the past year and a half. His name was Nguyen Van ring the fall and winter months that bracketed the signing of the Paris peace

In Good Faith

U.S. Embassy in 1968. During his long career he had been responsible for worist network in Saigon and had helped engineer the spectacular attack on geured in musti during a government dragnet south of Saigon, he had not in treated kindly. With American help the South Vietnamese had built him. base for a table, a chair, an open hole for a toilet—and ubiquitous hidden him. Like many Vietnamese, he believed his blood vessels contracted when he south in 1962 to take charge of the Communist counterespionage and A former deputy minister of "public security" in North Vietnam, Tại had own prison cell and interrogation room, both totally white, totally bare was exposed to frigid air. His quarters and interrogation room had thus been whion cameras and microphones to record his every waking and sleeping zerous assassinations and terrorist acts, and when in December 1970 he was South Vietnamese interrogators had spent over eight months with him titted with heavy-duty air conditioners and been kept thoroughly chilled went. His jailers had soon discovered one essential psychic-physical flaw this capture, trying to break him. They were unsuccessful. He told ome much incriminating evidence the government had on him, how much be Wistory, but once having been exposed to these accusers, he also knew just rontations with him forced him to surrender part of the false identity and an American specialist had been called in. He had made some progress formentors, "I'll shoot you down in the street if I ever get out." In early nament or had likewise been captured. Their testimony and face-to-face afronting Tai with former subordinates who had either defected to the admit and how much he could continue to conceal.

€.

----

In Good Faith

In the meantime, unknown to Tai himself, he had become the focus of one of the most delicate U.S. intelligence operations ever mounted in South Vietnam, one that seemed to hold the key to the release of countless American prisoners of war. The case dated back to 1967, three years before his capture. In August of that year the head of the secret Communist party organization in Saigon, a man named Tran Bach Dang, had contacted our Embassy through an emissary in Cambodia and offered to open negotiations on a possible prisoner exchange and on other "political issues." A subsequent contact revealed that Dang was angling for the release of ten high-level Communist operatives.

Despite the significance of the overture, not everyone in Saigon and Washington was receptive. President Nguyen Van Thieu was reluctant to release the ten prisoners on Dang's list because all were dedicated Communists and fores of his regime. CIA officials in Washington sympathized with his view. Only after considerable debate was a deal arranged. In December 1967 the South Vietnamese handed two low-ranking prisoners over to the Communists, one of them Dang's own wife, and Dang in turn promptly freed two Americans, Marine Corporal José Agosto-Santos and Army Private Luis Ortiz-Rivera. Thieu then released two of Dang's original nominees and two substitutes. At the same time the Embassy passed a list to the Communists of ten Americans for whom it wanted an accounting.

化 化 生成學 整理學 经

That ended the bargaining for the time being. Dang responded to neither Thieu's gesture nor our request. Instead, two weeks afterward, in late February 1968, Communist forces throughout South Vietnam launched the first phase of their Tet "general offensive." There were no further private exchanges on the prisoner issue until the offensive had run its course.

who over tend Defe evac guar

197

and

Finally, a year later, contacts were reopened at the Communists' initiative. In mid-January 1969 a French-speaking female who claimed to represent Dang telephoned the Embassy and proposed renewed discussions. Fearing another communications blackout, Embassy officials decided to try to make the most of the opening. They told the caller they wished to "identify" the prisoners available for release; in other words, they wanted a list of Americans in Communist prison camps. The request evidently did not impress Dang. The emissary did not call back.

The circuits remained silent for another year and a half, then abruptly came alive again in July 1971. Quite unexpectedly the Communist Provisional Revolutionary Government sent a letter to the Embassy requesting a special telephone number that could be used for continued discussions of the prisoner issue. The Embassy duly supplied one, publishing it in a bogus newspaper ad in one of the Saigon dailies, as suggested in the letter.

sador of th

terf

stor effo

For the next three months CIA operatives sat by an Embassy phone specially keyed to the number, but no one ever called. At last, in early October 1971, there was a surprise breakthrough. With almost no prior arrangement, the Communists released Army Sergeant John Sexton, who had been a prisoner of theirs for over a year. When the American trudged out of the jungle several miles south of the small town of Snoul, Cambodia, he carried with him mmunist request for reciprocity. In return for his freedom, Dang was and the release of two of his senior operatives within the next three One of them was a Communist labor agitator named Le Van Hoai. The Pas Nguyen Van Tai, the denizen of the government's snow-white cell was negative the previous December.

vorking against the short deadline, U.S. and South Vietnamese officials and every aspect of the proposal, the potential advantages and disadvantiflumately Thieu, seconded by the CIA, rejected it. Sexton was a mere annew, the two prisoners the Communists wanted for him were among the set-ranking enemy agents ever to fall into government hands.

The deadline was thus allowed to pass. For days the Communists seemed the Embassy. In exchange for Hoai and Tai, the caller said, the Communiere willing to offer a "high-ranking" American, Douglas K. Ramsey, in Service officer whom they had seized north of Saigon in 1966.

The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the Embassy and in Washington. The proposal set off a frantic debate in the

ine CIA was particularly adamant against surrendering Tai. As a senior official later explained to me, Tai was a top Communist intelligence vive; Ramsey was "no more than a Foreign Service officer." Thus, to have maded one for the other would have been no act of reciprocity at all. The tunists would have gotten the better side of the deal. Besides, the agency what to trade Tai for a CIA officer who had been captured during the then Dang's emissary telephoned on 27 November 1971, Embassy offiit forward their counterproposal: Hoai alone for Ramsey. Tai's status an enegotiable. In addition, they asked for a list of all prisoners of every ality who were being held by the Communists. What had begun as a ma, albeit extraordinary, series of contacts between the two sides had now into a bid for the release of all prisoners of war.

an days later the Communists gave their answer. Dang's representamed the Embassy that the counterproposal was unacceptable. Both Tai would have to be traded for Ramsey. Otherwise: no deal.

redibly, the CIA operative on the Embassy end of the line had no caption to propose. He simply hung up—and that was that. In effect, remment had just squandered a chance to obtain the release of an who had been a captive of the Communists for six years.

whe next few days American officials from Saigon to Washington tried to convince themselves they had done the right thing. Victnamer the CIA were particularly defensive, since they had been chiefly

In Good Faith

ઝ

Hoai for Ramsey, or nothing. slick by the counterproposal if the Communists should call again. It would be Kissinger and the National Security Council agreed on 17 December 1971 to responsible for taking Tai's name out of the bargaining. At their urging Saigon press, but the designated telephone line remained silent. tried to provoke a response through cryptically worded advertisements in the Days, then weeks, passed with no word from the other side. The Embass, the s accur and

1975

question concluded that any further dealing on the prisoner issue was now out of the Communist offensive since Tet 1968. The Embassy and the Thieu government demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam in the most ambitiou On Easter weekend 1972 North Vietnamese forces plunged across the sey's release. Government troops captured an old and battered Communis ing Ramsey and said he himself could now be traded for the American party member-Nam Quyet, one of Dang's right-hand men and chief of the interrogation, Quyet admitted that he knew of the earlier negotiations concern-"propaganda and training" section of the Communist party in Saigon. Under In May, however, something happened to revive the prospects for Ram officials also saw in the proposed deal the danger of acute political embarrassearlier. While delighted to have a new line on the American prisoner, U.S. to the press with the story, and the result undoubtedly would be a massive of Quyet's proposal until mid-September. By then the Communist offensive an immediate Vietnam peace. popular backlash in the United States that would only add to the pressure for Washington's refusal to go through with it? Once released, he might well go What if the Communists had briefed Ramsey on the earlier proposal and on ment to the Administration, at the very moment Kissinger least needed one Communist operative for Ramsey did not seem as attractive as it might have moving into a decisive stage. Against this backdrop, the idea of trading the old was winding down and the Kissinger-Le Duc Tho negotiations in Paris were Inexplicably, South Vietnamese authorities did not inform the Embassy agency's doorstep. The impact on the CIA's "public image" would be devastat Ramsey's release, any public reaction would inevitably find its way to the and the White House not to accept the original two-for-one proposal for a full public disclosure. Since it had been instrumental in persuading Kissinger There were also parochial concerns. The CIA had a special reason to fear selves. Before taking action on Quyet's suggestion, they moved to build an have to be demonstrated in the form of immediate and concrete intelligence hands, as they claimed he was. His worth as an "intelligence source" would for him in 1971, must now be shown to be the hottest property in Saigon's Van Tai, the man whom they had considered "too important" to be exchanged airtight excuse for having bungled Ramsey's release in the first place. Nguyen 'production" so no one could possibly object to the earlier decision not to Hastily, Administration and CIA officials devised a plan to protect them of the sador terfug

Defen Embas guard Depar

effort

tage p

the CIA's Vietnam Task Force, I was both available and qualified. Since for the Foreign Service officer if the story should ever become public. "apecialist" on North Vietnamese affairs, it was thought I might be was at this juncture I was brought into the case. Having just been fired prod sufficient information from Tai to establish his "strategic value." selse had been able to do so. icial briefed me on the case, stressing the need for immediate progress. t before I departed Washington for Saigon in October 1972, a senior during my first tour in Saigon. much of the initial dickering between Dang and the Embassy had taker the first I had heard of Tai or the proposed prisoner exchanges, even Ordinarily an interrogator would be given weeks to read into a case and ge his assault. I was thrust into Tai's frigid white chamber almost im-hard he repeated the routine, again and again throughout the day, until went through his exercises, read for half an hour from one of the French he was a small, though powerfully built, man who had kept himself in pared. Disciplined to an extreme, he awoke automatically each morning soot cell. Only his face showed the ravages of his prolonged isolation hysical trim by doing hours of calisthenics each day in his thirty-byhimself to bed, automatically, at ten o'clock in the evening, never once nost Vietnamese's, since he was allowed tweezers only twice a week to seen the rising or setting of the sun. t, drawn mask, ashen-hued for lack of sunlight, the beard far heavier mamese books his jailers provided him, and then awaited breakfast of many of our own intelligence operatives. Having sacrificed so much mile, could only have been traumatic. In addition, Tai was made in the was, saide from his aversion to cold air. As a rising young party member on in the early 1950s he had tried to prove himself to his superiors by secording to the record of the case, he had only two discernibly exploit peelf to his mission, he had been obliged to convince himself of its the falseness of any one of these premises and the whole personality to prosecute and imprison his own father, a distinguished North nese are powerfully family-oriented, such an act, no matter what the ese writer with a bleak view of the Communist utopia. Since the ness and of his own superior sense of duty and morality. Persuade

Tying both on my rusty French and a Vietnamese interpreter, I insulted oled, playing the insolent American with no respect for age or experiwhile attempting to shield his ego with half-truths about his exploits the counterattacked, clinging to what remained of his cover story, but mys told me more, always added to his dossier. I volunteered the story who had betrayed his father, and he flashed back "Don't try to trick such claptrap"—while denying the story was relevant to him in any idely upon my arrival in Saigon.

in to crumble.

Ċ,

In Good Faith

of the United States. I also gave him an English grammar and he tried to teach case. "I'm a simple farmer who came south to support the liberation force," he insisted, but he could not bring himself to turn down books of French poetry himself some phrases between sessions. I brought him—heavy fare for a simple farmer—or the Vietnamese historia scheduled two or three bouts with him, two or three hours each, varying their there are no illusions or disappointments. he said. "The only way I can survive this is by putting all such hope aside. Then 1962. Suddenly he grew very still. "I cannot think about my wife and children," his wife and children, whom he had not seen since he left North Vietnam in façade. I had been trying to spark some nostalgia by raising questions about during a morning session, I accidentally discovered a small fracture in his times so as to throw off his internal clock. Then, some six weeks into the case As the weeks passed, the going got rougher-for both of us. Each day | end of the Korean War, after all. Perhaps you will be released. you do if peace ever comes to Vietnam? There was a prisoner exchange at the your wife? How old is she? Are your children still going to school? What will I spent the next few weeks trying to drive the wedge deeper. What about another in his helpless grasping after the one hope he knew he could not afford.

I reported the progress to Washington. My superiors seemed satisfied. His dossier began to grow as he inadvertently let slip one detail after candy bar. Nam Quyet was more difficult. Whenever I prodded him with mouthfuls at me. tubercular scars in his lungs and throat. As the interrogation continued, blood sniveling and easy subject who would betray top secrets for a cigarette or a proposals concerning Ramsey. Hoai, the labor agitator, turned out to be a Van Hoai and Nam Quyet, the two other prisoners who had figured in the panded. In November 1972 I was invited to take on two additional sources, Le would begin oozing from his nose and mouth. He couldn't resist spitting leading questions he would lapse into a fit of coughing, thereby tearing open Since I was becoming such an expert on the case, my duties were ex-intelligence from all three sources. Tai seemed on the verge of collapse. Wash tactics. Then, abruptly, the cease-fire brought all these interrogations to a full ington urged me on; the South Vietnamese advised that I apply strong-arm Nonetheless, by early January 1973 I was beginning to generate usable by the government and the Communists were to be informed of the terms of days later I informed Nguyen Van Tai. days of the signing. On 1 February 1973 I briefed Hoai and Nam Quyet. Two the agreement, including the provision for prisoner exchange, within several In keeping with understandings reached in Paris, all prisoners of war held the sleeves of the gray pajama shirt hanging limp from his shoulders. "I have my life." His face betrayed no emotion. His hands remained folded in his lap. what you tell me is true," he said in French, "then this is the happiest day of He sat for a moment, trembling in the draft of the air conditioning.

> T said I did not know. The seasoned revolutionary, in his forty-fifth the eve of peace, was wary of surrendering himself to the ultimate me in the great-power conference in Geneva. We must not be sold estion," he said at last. "Will the 'liberation forces' be permitted and faith in me. They insisted the terms of the prisoner exchange did to him, since he had never acknowledged his full identity. the last I saw of Nguyen Van Tai. South Vietnamese authorities that I had informed him of the Paris accord. They grumbled that shered the only leverage they still had with him and had betrayed in accordance with the U.S. government's desire to end its Embassy took me off the case. Other American personnel likewise ty for disposing of all Communist prisoners was turned over to the wdrawn from interrogation centers around the country, and the rein Vietnam.

Spear and a half later, as analyst and briefer for the Embassy, I lectured was unique—ten or twelve American military officers and civilian puffered while a guest of Tran Bach Dang. He had spent most of those in South Vietnam. Among them was the man whose fate had been of special visitors from Washington on the status of the cease-fire. The in a small bamboo cage, just large enough for him to stand, in a pursuant to the terms of the accord. When I saw him he was still all of whom had once been prisoners of the Communists, either in with a cane. His legs were partially disabled as a result of malnutrition K. Ramsey. He had been released in early 1973, just after the cane question, which held unintended irony. "How good is the ely intertwined with that of Nguyen Van Tai and my other sources nt prison camp near the Cambodian border. During my briefing he underground subversive apparatus?"

reperatives have been killed or captured." as effective as it was before Tet 1968," I replied. "Most of their pevealed to him the details of the intelligence operation that had very pought his release in 1971. It was the first time he had heard of it. His in after the collapse of South Vietnam, I visited Ramsey in Washingin the State Department had not seen fit to inform him that he had atra year in a Communist prison camp because the CIA had not him important or valuable enough to be exchanged for Nguyen Van before North Vietnamese tanks rolled into Saigon a senior CIA Nam Quyet survived the Communist takeover in April 1975, he did pested to South Vietnamese authorities that it would be useful if he ed." Since Tai was a trained terrorist, he could hardly be expected Tai himself, there was no salutary ending to his ordeal. While both imous victor. The South Vietnamese agreed. Tai was loaded onto an airplane and thrown out at ten thousand feet over the South China Sea. At that point he had spent over four years in solitary confinement, in a snow-white room, without ever having fully admitted who he was.

This story is not unique. On several occasions during the last years of the Vietnam war, the Communists secretly offered to release various American prisoners, only to be held off by the U.S. government as it angled for "better terms." The CIA was particularly inflexible, usually insisting on strict reciprocity, an intelligence operative for an intelligence operative, as if agency personnel deserved first consideration over any other Americans who might be prisoners of the Communists. Douglas Ramsey was lucky. He lost only one additional year of freedom as a result of such "gaming." Others were not so lucky. They lost their lives or their health, to disease, malnutrition and Communist abuse, as the haggling dragged on.*

*One other "player" in this prisoner-exchange story apparently also came to grief. A short white before the cease-fire, Tran Bach Dang was summarily temoved from his post as Communist party chief in Saigon. One of the charges brought against him by his superiors was "subjectivism," a tendency to want to run the show in his own way, without due attention to mandates from above

204 204

Leaves from a Pocket Notebook

natury 29, 1973: Long five the Vietnam peace, but keep your head down. wenty-four hours after the cease-fire the outgoing's still rattling Saigon's pudows.

Reports have it that the PRG delegates to the Joint Military Commission Reports have it that the PRG delegates to the Joint Military Commission refused to disembark at Tan Son Nhut air base in protest over governat customs regulations (to submit to them, they claim, would imply recognise of Thieu and his "clique"). To add to the confusion, the Hungarian and the presentatives to the International Commission of Control and Superion apparently are put out over their living accommodations at Tan Son aut. Thieu has offered them billets usually reserved for South Vietnamese may dependents, but the proletarians from Eastern Europe feel they deserve ther.

Group of Poles downtown yesterday: they nearly broke their necks cranafter the local beauties. A bunch of them apparently got thoroughly porized in the "Golden Hands" Steam and Massage Parlor.

The first wave of prisoner exchanges went off like clockwork yesterday.

ao one in the Embassy seems interested. Despite the general elation about the and all that, some of us are suffering a kind of lover's letdown. The thin's all spent. No great storm and strife to justify further self-indulgence. The pleasures are becoming dully routinized. Each evening the same of lard-bound colleagues gather at the rooftop bar on the restaurant of the Embassy for a few laughs and some booze. The jokes are as stale popcorn, and promptly at 7 P.M. the usual swarm of bats materializes thanked of activity over the swimming pool in the courtyard.

It's hard to accept," the Vietnamese girl I had known during my previour mused this afternoon over tea on the veranda of the Continental but the soothsayers around town say the Americans' time has come over you touch you now leave tainted and broken." She's an educated gence coup, one that provided an invaluable insight into what we cape best of motives Polgar had just handed the North Vietnamese another Politburo could adjust its plans and strategy accordingly. In effect, or the North Vietnamese and the North Vietnamese an Washington. The Hungarians in turn alerted Hanoi to our thinking to Polgar immediately cabled a summary of the Hungarians' rem the difficult and perplexing issue of Hanoi's political intentions. personnel simplistically alarmist in line with Polgar's specifications, coming over the hill. I also kept my briefings to visitors and other E tikely to convince any reader in Washington the North Vietnamese munist planning documents—with a commentary I had written—that we quently, we declassified and leaked to the press two recently captured of the need for additional aid, and he was determined to do his part Q Polgar's drumfire about the military threat. Congress had yet to be perm The newly highlighted prospects for a political solution did age as though we're facing the final reckoning." a CIA colleague threw up his hands in dismay. "Good Christ!" he excl. "You were telling us only a few weeks ago everything was secure. Now a After one of my particularly vivid dissertations on the Communiat ministrative component took an even more drastic precaution. They selves against the onslaught. gether caches of arms and ammunition just in case they had to defend water, and several senior CIA officers ordered their subordinates to section proceeded to store up additional supplies of C-rations and drive of my colleagues began planning for the worst. The Station's admin At the same time the Defense Attache's Office and the Emb Such sentiments soon became widespread in the Embassy, and a

"The two planning papers—COSYN Directive of and a Binh Dinh Province Results gether with my commentary were issued as a single package through the suppose of office in Saigon, as part of its continuing series "Vietnam: Documents and Research Nature USIA, by charter, is supposed to be a vehicle for projecting America's best impressionable and the continuing series "best impressionable in the continuing series" best impressionable in the continuing series "best impressionable in the continuing series" best impressionable in the continuing series and the continuing series and the continuing series are series and the continuing series and the continuing series are series and the continuing series are series frequently provided journalists through its "Documents" series intelligence which is in charge of the project. Working with a small staff, they refined parts and Captain Cornelius Carmody, the Air Force and Navy Attacha, bassy in the world has one, as a matter of routine.) Colonel Garvin Med updating the Embassy's standing 400-page evacuation plan. (Each U. staries I had produced. My good friend Jim Haley of USIA ng intelligence to the western press on Communist procedural, rather than substantive, and as the four military regions and, finally, Saigon. developing a separate scenario for the evacua mal plan they retained was its arbitrary ceiling pes: no more than 6,800 in total, the majority nced a similar requirement. DAO was drawing up a contingency pla Mear and asked him if he wanted to participate gence agents and high-ranking government offi rmary, as the exercise continued, a DAO the military situation, he could not bring himself gaid no; he saw no reason to become involve For have to be abandoned or that a full evacua to help buck up the Administration's position in t iir alarmist propaganda, Ambassador Martin tr brofitably. In carly February he packed up and impority of us in the Embassy labored over o on arrival he began agitating among Admir program sufficient to leave Saigon "economics pessional contacts for a scheme close to his he

Hail-Fellow

Jour. If the United States was prepared to cut Sa after the next presidential election. my, President Ford formally endorsed the overal and several of the more cynical legislators con gton remained unimpressed. Schlesinger consideration was meant simply to win the Administrati mented to a reporter, why not now? Cor

Navy pilot in Vietnam, announced that his inter one of Martin's pet demons. Representative Bel other than Don Luce, constant critic of Ame Rebruary it offered to postpone all hearings on all weeks so a team could be put together an leaved days, however, a flap developed over the t the aid proposal itself, but in Congress' persp Tom Manhattan, disclosed she was planning to such sniping in stride. The trouble, he assure into the situation, the opposition would mel nate could be persuaded to send an official fact entative Tom Harkin, a young Democrat fro ration in fact had long been in favor of such a saleyed fact-finding team to Indochina. section was to subject the skeptics to some direct heat. He therefore was established when Congress decided at the end of February to send its muchpeats, he was convinced, as he later explained to me, that the only way to force we still playing coy with the Administration over the supplemental aid re-Ombam Martin now wanted to have it out once and for all. Since Congress

The delegation seemed somewhat more manageable from Martin's view-bestinon's. With so many skeptics on his hands, Martin knew he would have no had chosen to schedule a fact-finding tour of his own to coincide with the Mella Abzug. The powerful and articulate "Pete" McCloskey of California mere liberal constituents were Donald Fraser of Minnesota and the irrepressiwere not among them. Still, the group did pose a challenge. Among its Wirenty-one, and young Congressman Harkin and his controversial sid Don point than the originally proposed one. There were only six members, instead es under arms)—against nearly 200,000 Communist regulars in the fieldmillion 1.1 lo lator a had 300,000 combat troops (and a total of 1.1 million bould not be viewed as a measure of the strength of the two sides. Although *Ambassador's own briefing book. The current balance of forces, I argued, functic realities." The line it spun out could have been lifted verbatim from an One of them dealt lengthily with what Polgar liked to describe as the I was also directed to produce several special memoranda for the occa-Mormation on which they were based were among our most sensitive. is handed out like programs on first night, even though the sources and any Several of my field appraisals were declassified and mimeographed, to bishags or position papers. My own office was slated to carry much of the entry general that was meant to impress through sheer spectacle. Each agency Typically, he left nothing to chance. He whipped up a Barnum and Bailey to some hard and fast persuading. ficini (oiter etcolla ad a flow wol te of or soite. da or nos.

idw nad!-ed with the --cight ye ool a mid : f black by

th count

BW WOT 12

dauors eid nze pe kw a diw ovi aman 🔊 he took P decided he iote relax ol of the D р рэдоч Polgar had decided to make further use of his grit and personal estationing him at Ngh's imperiled headquarters.

When my own office colleague, Joe Kingsley, had first learn assignment, he had objected vehemently. Communist forces were marks, he had told Polgar, they might be able to overrun Phan Rang with warning at all. But Polgar had refused to reconsider, and had merely Taggart in Bien Hoa, who was "control officer" for the mission, as James on location overnight if an attack against Phan Rang scemed is a second of the property of the mission.

Incredibly, however, Taggart and Pittman, the backup man had failed to take even this precaution and had left James in Phan Rafter night despite the mounting Communist pressure. Taggart later gustify this to me by insisting the Station had not kept him adequately of the developing threat at Phan Rang. He may have had a point, par in view of Polgar's reluctance to share alarming intelligence with his nates. James himself may also have contributed to the confusion, former Special Forces officer, he enjoyed a good fight and had need to be provided to the Station as fully apprised of the evolving crisis as have.

In any case, the end came, on the morning of the sixteenth, fast any of us had anticipated. I had just finished reading the morning into file when a radio message from James flooded in over the "Diamon transceiver in the communications room next to my office. Joe King I were at the console immediately. Through a hash of static James of that he, Nghi and Brigadier General Pham Ngoc Sang, commander of Air Division, were in a bunker together. They were all right, he said, by Vietnamese tanks were even then probing the perimeter. Joe told would send a chopper to pull him out at once. No, James replied, the necessary, not yet anyway. ARVN forces were still holding. Besides, I his own chopper.

At that moment Howard Archer, the former Nha Trang Bawalked in on us. Scizing the microphone, he asked James to despredicament. He then made a decision, one that left Kingsley and tounded. James was to stay in place for the time being, he said, but win every half-hour to assure us he was okay. So ended our last radio with Lew James.

When Communist forces moved into the city hours later, they put hand Sang under arrest. Liberation Radio soon disclosed the eithe two Vietnamese, but failed to mention the American. In Saigon the omission as a sign the CIA man had escaped—or had been killed to the North Vietnamese were keeping silent about him until they down who he was.

Unraveling his identity turned out to be fairly easy. Like so may James had been sent to Vietnam under "light cover," his official "Liddescribing him as an "employee of the U.S. Embassy" and a "Foreign Reserve Officer." These titles were transparent. Journalists, Vietnam almost anyone else with an interest in ferreting out the Embassy's contingent had long ago seen through them.*

James (sace, the cover problem had been compounded by bureaucratic lams). Within hours of his disappearance Station administrators discovered one could be quite sure what his cover was, whether he had been given the cover was the cover was a confidence of the cover was whether he had been given the cover designation or something more claborate.

Decials at CIA headquarters immediately began building a new cover for labeling him a "U.S. consular officer" so that if the press discovered he assing, his agency affiliation could be concealed. This could hardly a James himself, of course. On the contrary, it could only do him harm, having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the CIA had given him, he could scarcely having no idea what new label the could scarcely having no idea what new label the could have not never himself.

The day after his capture NVA officers began grilling James on the spot.

That they threatened to beat him, then made good on their threat. Despite

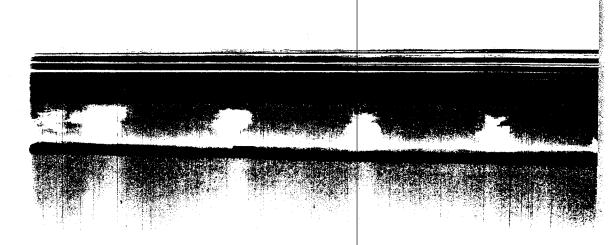

That treatment, he initially held firm, relying on the technique, so favored

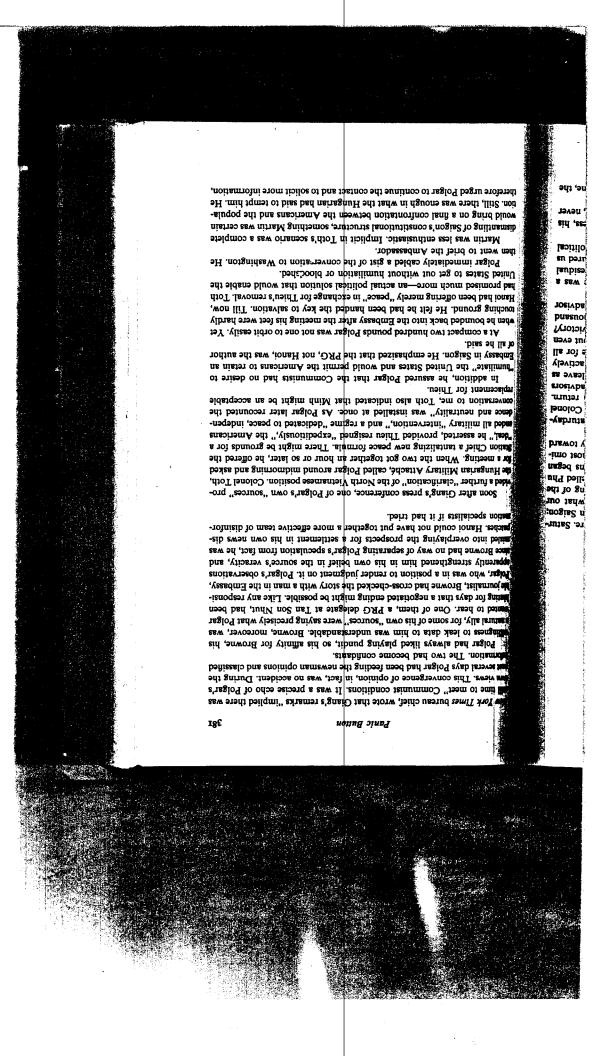

That treatment, of feigning ignorance of anything but a fragment of the "big

After a week or so his captors, frustrated but determined to break him, meted him and the two South Vietnamese generals to Hanoi. There they meted them up in Son Tay Frison, where countless American filers had sized out their capture years before, and began putting James through intense interrogation, eventually confronting him with a large dossier that had see compiled from "sources" in Laos, where he had once served. The file metified him unequivocably as a CIA officer, largely on the basis of testimony at Laoian who had known him well. From that point on, it was utterly the for him to try to deny knowledge of the CIA, its operations or its agents. The breaking of Lew James was, in large measure, a reflection on the point of those for whom he worked. The young CIA officer had been sent a tucless and dangerous assignment with little guidance or protection from Sauion. If he betrayed certain "secrets," CIA management, not James, and answer first.

Over a half year after the fall of South Vietnam, James was freed by Hanoi with the handful of westerners captured at Ban Me Thuot) under a processional arrangement" worked out by the CIA through another western the contraction. He was indeed the last CIA operative in Vietnam.

The prompt a change. With the departure of the U.S. military in the wake of the cease-fire, the had lost most of its military cover "slots" in Vietnam. (Many of the ald been maylerade may a credible alternative. As a result, many CIA officers ended up with almost no cover departure of constantly faced exposure by Vietnamese, Hungarian or Polish intelligence operatives.

and fell one story to the parapet around the roof of the building. He several broken bones and was medevacked out at once. As Moored dered up to the sixth floor one of the marines collared him and asked stand in for the injured trooper. Moorefield wearily agreed.

"It really wasn't much of a job," he later explained. "As each little of evacuees got to the door leading up to the roof, I'd brief them, then them up to the pad itself and help them onto the chopper.

"My most vivid memory is of how tired I was, so very tired. I had in over two days, except for that one hour I'd caught at home the night. But I knew I couldn't fall asleep. There was no one to take my place.

"It was all business up there on the roof. No one spoke and we all about our work with extreme care and attention. The prop blast from choppers was, of course, gale force, and since there were no guard rails at the pad, you had to be careful you didn't stumble and get blown over the like the marine.

"At the edge of the roof the smokestacks from incinerators on the below were still going full blast, belching flames and smoke high into the And on takeoff the chopper pilots had to veer sharply away from them to being blinded. The scene kinda reminded me of a funeral pyre, the roof embassy flaming away into the night.

"Soon after I took up station on the roof, the marines severed the Embagrounds from the recreation compound out back and sealed the door. But lights stayed on over there, and from my airy perch I could see the log gleefully picking through the ruins. The atmosphere was almost carnival." The marine-sans were carrying away everything that wasn't bolted down curtains, chairs, silverware, literally everything! The swimming pool was all with junk, and in the parking lot beside the restaurant all the abandon automobiles were running. The looters were playing bumper cars with the

"On the other side of the Embassy, out front in the street, I could see will believed to be VC political cadres haranguing the crowds. There'd be a lot oration—five to ten minutes—periodically interrupted by a round of applain I couldn't catch what was being said, but the irony was impressive nonetheles Just imagine it: to the rear, part of the citadel was being looted by old wone and young boys, and out front, heresy of heresies, political cadres were donit their deed on the Embassy's own doorstep.

The second s

"In the distance I could see fires still burning in the Tan Son Nhut-Bid Hoa area, and tracer rounds sporadically reaching up after our jets. Over the trees I caught glimpses of the city itself—so dead, so quiet. It was as if we were in an interlude between the changing of the guard, the old regime, the old we of life giving way to the new."

Below the helicopter pad, in his abandoned office on the sixth floor of the Embassy. Tom Polgar had just finished beating out a cable to Washington on his old manual typewriter. It was something of a historic communication, as the pointed out in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advision to the pointed out in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines: "With receipt presidential message advisor in the first few lines in the first few lines

;

ing that evacuation American Embassy must be completed before 0345 local part of April, wish to advise that this will be final message from Saigon part of the will take us about twenty minutes to destroy equipment. Accordspation. It will take us about twenty minutes to destroy equipment. Accordingly, approximately 0320 hours local time we must terminate classified transingly, approximately 0320 hours local time we must terminate classified transingly, approximately 0320 hours local time we must terminate classified transingly.

SECRETARIST PROPERTY.

The state of the state of

In the next paragraph he turned eloquently philosophical, as if he knew In the next paragraph he turned eloquently philosophical, as if he knew he was writing for posterity. But like so many other messages he had sent to he was writing for posterity. But like so many other messages he had sent to washington in recent weeks, what he said revealed more about his own illuwashington in recent weeks, what he said revealed more about his own illustriant beginning of the Communist offensive three months before, Polgar at the beginning of the Congressional parsimony—"niggardly half measures—was the cause of Saigon's undoing. "It has been ures" was his catch phrase—was the cause of Saigon's undoing. "It has been ures" was his catch phrase—was the cause of Saigon's undoing. "It has been ures" was his catch phrase—was the cause of Saigon's undoing. "It has been ures" was his catch phrase—was the verole. "This experience unique a long and hard fight and we have lost;" he wrote. "This experience unique a long and hard fight and we have cost of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States as a world power. The severity of the defeat and the circum-United States are an extensive the commitment of the severity of the defeat and the circum-United States and the circum-United States are an extensive the comm

Committee of the second

learned our lesson.

"Saigon signing off."

In Washington, almost at the same moment, CIA Director Colby was completing his own funal message to Polgar, which in its way was equally completing his own funal message to Polgar, which in its way was equally memorable. "As we approach end of communication with Saigon," he ascreted, "I would like to record Agency's pride and satisfaction with the job that series, it is more true than in these past few weeks. The courage, integrity, dedication and high competence the Agency displayed in a variety of situations over those years has been fully matched and even surpassed by your performance these years has been fully matched and even surpassed by your performance during this difficult final phase. Thousands of Vietnamese owe their lives and future hopes to your efforts, your Government has profited immensely from the accuracy and breadth of your reporting and your country will one day the accuracy and breadth of your represented its best instincts and ideals learn with admiration of the way you represented its best instincts and ideals.

Shortly before 3 A.M. there was another brief lull in the helo-lift from the courtyard. Martin, fearful that the U.S. military had finally reached the end courtyard. Pleaded for at least six more big CH-53s—a number which, he of its tether, pleaded for at least six more big CH-53s—a number which, he insisted, would finally accommodate all the civilians in the compound. Reluctiantly Whitmire agreed. Within the next forty minutes the half-dozen choppers tantly Whitmire agreed. Within the meantime, the Embassy's remaining comlanded in quick succession. In the meantime, the Embassy's remaining communications officers smashed what was left of their radio gear and joined the munications officers smashed what was left of their radio gear and joined the diminishing passenger lines on the sixth floor.

failed to get out. That in itself provides a telling commentary on the evacuation, it is noteworthy that such a large number of his own evacue Operations (SAFFO) was technically in charge of the latter phase leadership the Ambassador imposed on us in Saigon's final days. Since George Jacobson, the Ambassador's Special Assistant a highly knowledgeable Communist defector who had provided us of years with our most comprehensive data on COSVN and its personal without them. they were of draft age. The defector, needless to say, had refused 👸 late April, Jacobson had offered to evacuate him, but not his two son Among those on Jacobson's own evacuee rolls who were left bel leader, for whom he had assumed responsibility. Luette went to a design Communists later jailed him.* rendezvous point on the final day of the war, but was never picked upo Jacobson also bungled the evacuation of Nay Luette, the montal contacts with the agency over the years. with 2,000 others—including family members—who had enjoyed priv were made available to me. According to these tabulations, only about months following the Communist victory. Yet several of my former colleevacuated, or left behind, remained hidden away in agency vaults the Station's 1,900 "indigenous employees" were finally evacuated, to who were outraged at what had taken place, saw to it that some basic sta Because of the sensitivity of their jobs, the list of CIA locals who

General MacNamara and orders from Saigon, "Larry Downs" of the CLA aboard an evacuation flight. mal guidance, also made certain that Vietnamese friends and co-workers rescued. Countless other CIA men, often working on their own or with succeeded in moving the employees of the radio station House 7 and roster. Similarly, by ignoring Polgar and operating in secret, Bill John in Can Tho managed to evacuate by helicopter all 300 Vietnamese of counted for the Station's most successful rescue efforts. By defying C families (roughly 1,000 people) to Phu Quoc Island, from which they were As was true of other elements of the Mission, individual initiati a whole. Consequently, large categories of Vietnamese who faced untold on dividuals could not compensate for the ineptitude of Station management Unfortunately, however, the imagination and perseverence of such > proteges; a large staff of clerks and computer operators which the Station had police Branch, whose training the CIA had financed and supervised, 400 ger from the Communists or whose capture could prejudice American intelliset up to keep book on PRG personalities; the young Vietnamese who served working echelon members of the Central Intelligence Organization, also our gence interests were left behind. Among them: the 400 members of the Special our special radio links with Vietnamese police headquarters; the hundred or s our clandestine radio operators at the Embassy; the staff which maintained at the Duc Hotel on the final day; several agents from Bien Hoa; the 70 more Victnamese, including maids, waitresses and agents, who had collected counterterrorist agents-perhaps numbering as high as 30,000-specially to pinpoint and hunt down their former Communist comrades; and countless high-level defectors who had worked closely with the Station over the years translators whom "Harry Linden" had tried to rescue; literally hundreds of unpardonable mistake of failing to ensure the destruction of the personnel files trained to operate with the Phoenix Program. and intelligence dossiers we had helped the government assemble—and which identified so many of those left on the tarmac or outside the gates of the Embassy. Equally unfortunate, the capture and interrogation of the young Then too, to compound our errors and their costs, we committed that directly at our own operations. on agency activities also was lost to the Communists at the time of the collapse. gelmann, who had previously worked in Saigon, returned to look for Viet-During the last week in April a retired CIA officer named Tucker Gouorganizations, he died in captivity a year later. What he disclosed under the North Victnamese. Interrogated by the Soviet KGB and other intelligence namese friends, somehow missed the final helo-lift, and was later captured by questioning has not been determined. His knowledge of CIA operations and personnel both in Vietnam and elsewhere in Asia was considerable. Although the Station bore no immediate responsibility, another authority be known. There are too many unanswered questions. But based on what can be ascertained, it is not too much to say that in terms of squandered lives, it through stupidity and mismanagement. blown secrets and the betrayal of agents, friends and collaborators, our han-Bay of Pigs invasion of 1961 had the agency put so much on the line, and lost dling of the evacuation was an institutional disgrace. Not since the abortive The full impact of CIA losses and failures in Vietnam will probably never equipment losses resulting from Saigon's defeat were massive. NVA forces, American planning. Despite Erich Von Marbod's last-minute salvage efforts, military hardware, including 550 tanks, 73 F-5 jet fighters, 1,300 artillery according to Pentagon estimates, captured over $5 billion in U.S. supplied pieces, 1,600,000 rifles and enough other matériel to field an entire army, air But lives and secrets were not the only items of value forfeited to poor for the CIA), only 47 were among the 200 people who sailed with MacNamara down the ne kind of results. Of the 573 locals on the consulate's evacuee lists (excluding those who we highlands in mid- and late-March, only around eighty had been logged in at the Guarreception center as of 8 July 1975. As for Vietnam's other ethnic minorities: only about the Chinese Nungs and forty northern "black Thais" had turned up on Guam by the same data. *Luette's fellow montagnard tribesmen fared no better, though Jacobson certainly does not go sole responsibility for this. Of the estimated 5,000 montagnards who had escaped from thighlands in mid- and less-Month then, an unknown number have escaped from Vietnam on their own.

CIA officer "Lew James," led to the exposure of information that struck

would soon become unserviceable without American spare parts, even East in business for some time. tion of it would keep insurgent or terrorist movements in Asia or the force and navy. Although the Pentagon claimed that much of this equ ample evidence that they intended to crush every vestige of indepe if the Communists refrained from the most extreme "solutions," there thought and action in the south. Yet few of us could take any comfort from what actually did take place nists meant to dispose of the friends and the country we had left behind. scanned the refugee reports from Vietnam for some clue to how the Con all signs, the blood bath the White House had predicted never materia who had been involved in the evacuation and who knew of its failings an are In the months immediately following the Communist victory, though foyer to commemorate the five servicemen killed in the Communist atta the Embassy in 1968. ransacked. An American journalist, who had stayed behind to cover takeover, managed to save the metal plaque that had hung in the down Minh was placed under arrest. Soon afterward the American Embassy National Liberation Front was hoisted over the Presidential Palace and " Saigon on the morning of 30 April. At 12:15 P.M., local time, the flag of The NVA 324th Division was the first major Communist unit to produce a formally unified Vietnam a year later. terms their arrival marked the beginning of the absorption process that wo North Vietnamese notables also showed up to survey the spoils. In practic extraordinary victory. Within the next few days Le Duan and various of at Ben Cat. No doubt he treated himself to a cigarette or two to celebrate The following day General Dung drove to Saigon from his headquarte to help buttress the party structure and reorganize the economy. an influx of secret police and some 30,000 administrative cadres from the nor troops stayed on to ensure the loyalty of Hanoi's new subjects. There was all two NVA divisions would be withdrawn in the next two years, over 150,00 The army thus remained the primary instrument of control. Although one of was in shambles, thanks in part to the depredations of the Phoenix Program At the time of the Communist victory the party apparatus in the sou all went to former COSVN officials. trative apparatus was finally set up in the city in early 1976, the three top post Due I ho remained the actual formulators of policy. When a civilian admin deputy, served as Hanoi's front man in Saigon, although Pham Hung and During the first nine months General Tran Van Tra, Dung's princt assembly, but only a scattering of PRG or "third force neutralists" were the entire population of Vietnam went to the polls to elect a new national The PRG meanwhile was swept into the dustbin of history. In March 1973 > country unified under its control. The president of the National Liberation party beforehand. A few weeks later, on 2 July, the eclipse of the southern the ballots, and the lists of candidates had all been carefully screened by the in a position of minor consequence. Eventually the National Liberation Front front was reduced to a ceremonial vice-presidential post in Hanoi and the PRG's well-known Foreign Minister, Nguyen Thi Binh, likewise found herself "revolution" and its spokesmen became complete. Hanoi formally declared the

Internal Hemorrhaging

cations were stopped and over 200 Catholic prelates were arrested and imprisof militant opposition to the Saigon regime, was closed down; religious publisect in the delta were jailed; the An Quang Buddhist Pagoda, once the center first targets. The leaders of the bitterly anti-Communist Hoa Hao Buddhist crush all potential or actual opposition. Organized religion was among their on charges of being a "CIA agent." against Thieu in the fall of 1974. Ironically, the Communists arrested Thanh Huu Thanh, the fire-breathing priest who had led the anti-corruption drive oned, including the Bishops of Danang and Nha Trang and the Reverend Tran was dissolved. Within a year of their victory the Communists also moved decisively to sion, over 200,000 of them were sent to reeducation camps in the first year. at former government officials and military personnel. By Hanoi's own admis cleaning out the toilets of party cadres to deactivating minefields, often with people were assigned to each cell. The daily food ration amounted to no more no training or proper equipment. In another, outside Nha Trang, over fifty obliged to perform every manner of demeaning and dangerous task, from resembled something out of Solzhenitsyn. In one, near Tay Ninh, inmates were Located in remote areas, often close to former Communist bases, the camps letters, the format of which was dictated by authorities. himself. Every two months he and his family were allowed to exchange short received a change of pajamas, and once a week a bucket of water to cleanse diseases like beriberi thus became widespread. Every six months each inmate or even than 200 grams of rice, barely enough for subsistence, with seldom any meat The most draconian of Hanoi's security measures, however, were directed fish sauce to provide needed protein. Malnutrition and attendant had been given over to former police officials, was burned to the ground with According to one widely repeated refugee account, a camp near Saigon, which eliminated many of those who had "rallied" to the government not break their spirit. It was also reported that NVA forces systematically the inmates inside after the authorities discovered that privation alone could Occasionally torture and even execution were meted out to intransigents number still approximated 200,000) were to be tried by people's courts and detention (unofficially a Communist official in Saigon acknowledged that the ranks during the war. and veterans of Thieu's puppet regime who refused "to repent their crimes "severely punished." Among those singled out were "lackeys of imperialism" In June 1976 Hanoi announced that twelve categories of people still under

5 g the ever ials se of 5u i uur 5 ment. rs of Merit į ₹ Was 77 10022

ade desidence

it had refused to evacuate in the final days of the war. whom the CIA had helped frame as a Communist in the early 1970s and that surfaced in subsequent refugee reports were not unfamiliar to CIA H agement. One of them was that of Tran Ngoc Chau—the opposition La the CIA Station and the Embassy had left behind. In fact, some of the many or who "owed blood debts to the people." The list read like a roster of war, unified Vietnam was among the twenty-five poorest countries in massive foreign aid that had been lavished on Hanoi and Saigon during ployed by the dissolution of Thieu's government and army, and despite and the economy of the south according to their ideological lights. The pri lems they faced were staggering. Over 3,500,000 people had been left ung nists attempted in the two years following their takeover to revamp the soci In addition to cracking down on real or imagined opponents, the Conn chised, stripped of jobs, pensions and state housing, and denied access staunchest anti-Communist force in the country, was effectively disentito less than forty dollars. At the same time the south's middle class, long t currency for new. The conversion effectively reduced most people's life savi months later all citizens were given exactly twelve hours to exchange the poverty. In June 1975 all bank accounts in the south were frozen, and for One of the Communists' first (unspoken) objectives was to try to equa monthly wage, and a shirt roughly double. summer of 1977 one chicken, at ten dollars, cost half of a southerner's aven marketing of vital commodities, inflation jumped by fifty percent. By Meanwhile, as the new authorities moved to take over the rationing

The state of the s

by the Americans, quickly revived. a far cry from any Communist utopia. Housing, food and medical facilities were almost nonexistent, and diseases like malaria, which had been contains be resettled by 1980. In spite of official claims, these wilderness redoubts we called "new economic zones" in the countryside, with over 5,000,000 more city dwellers—including 200,000 from Saigon—were forcibly moved to tempted to pare the urban population down to manageable size. Over 1,500,0 To meet the awesome problems of the cities the Communists also who look at socialism with a grudging eye or who describe all aspects socialism in a passive manner." fiantly, the regime would continue to "deprive all rights of freedom to those all charges of wrongdoing. As Hanoi's army newspaper later declared with peace activists," The Politburo, however, ignored these pleas and rejected you have expressed both in formal agreements and in countless conversations a public appeal calling on Hanoi "to honor the concern for human rights which United States. In December 1976 a group of former anti-war activists issued The policies of the Communist regime did not go totally unnoticed in the 8 > since 1960, was convened in Hanoi to ratify a five-year development program were not passing aberrations. In the winter of 1976 a party Congress, the first North Vietnam in the mid-1950s, Luong happened to be the uncle of someone An old-line Stalinist who had engineered the bloody land-reform program in Politburo members, a man named Le Van Luong, was of special interest to me. allies and protégés of hard-liners like Le Duan. One of the newly appointed The Politburo and the party Central Committee also were expanded to include that preserved and elaborated on the policies that had already been set out. forces rolled into Saigon. the snow-white cell who had been executed just hours before Communist had known well at the time of the cease-fire-Nguyen Van Tai, the man in The trends that emerged during the first two years of Communist rule began cutting back their aid to Hanoi, canceling non-refundable grants altohumiliation of the United States was complete, the Soviets and the Chinese they had enjoyed in the past. Indeed, once the war had been won and the discovered that they could not count on the kind of support from their allies victory to pay lip service to the ideal of Communist solidarity, they soon would have to look elsewhere for benefactors. The prospect of seeking assistgether, and it quickly became apparent to Le Duan and his colleagues that they ance even from the United States itself became a very real consideration. Although the rulers of the new Vietnam continued in the wake of their sional delegation visited Hanoi in December 1975 to seek information on the on the last day of the war. In March 1976 Kissinger himself initiated a secret 2,700 American servicemen still missing in action, and several weeks later to Hanoi, "will benefit from placing the past behind us and developing the basis exchange of diplomatic notes. "The interests of peace and security," he wrote the two young marines who had been killed in the shelling of Tan Son Nhut Senator Edward Kennedy asked the Communists to repatriate the remains of a gesture of good will. dramatic turnabout released the names of twelve missing American pilots as apparent that Washington would not bend to this demand, and Hanoi in a the cease-fire-as the price for further dealings. By August, however, it was from the United States-a figure Nixon had mentioned secretly at the time of the dialogue continued sporadically as Hanoi insisted on $4.2 billion in aid for a new relationship between the two countries." For the next few months The Americans themselves made the first overtures. A select Congres-conciliation. In May 1977 American and Vietnamese negotiators met around soon sent a presidential commission to Hanoi to explore new avenues of months later, it chose to overlook the human-rights problems in Vietnam and an oval table in Paris to begin concrete discussions. That opened the door. When the Carter Administration took office several

Congress remained opposed to Hanoi's aid demands, and Le Duan was deter-The bargaining was bound to be difficult, particularly since a majority in behind might well be allayed. tion to seek retribution against those tens of thousands the Americans had accepted in the West, and could expect some measure of assistance, its tems and that was invaluable, for once Hanoi could be made to believe it had to mined to hold out for maximum concessions. Yet a beginning had been mercen blamed for wanting to put it out of mind? standable. After all the bloodshed and bitterness of the war, who could Hanoi's victory to establish a new relationship with the Victnamese, no Americans tried to forget about Vietnam altogether. The amnesia was und While official Washington labored quietly in the two years follows:

Internal Hemorrhaging

us to forget how it had ended—or at least to remember only what best suit official conjuring. Those who had made cease-fire policy in Victnam want their versions of the truth. Yet there was also, behind the silence and public indifference, a big the Soviets had played "a moderately constructive role in enabling us to understand the possibilities there were for the evacuation, both of American and South Vietnamese, and the possibilities that might exist for a political solution."

While still on board the USS Blueridge, Polest results. others for fools. By his lights (as he put it later, in another press conference the help of the Hungarians, Poles and the French, had played him and so man a different story. Nor was he candid enough to admit that the Soviets, with upon, he maintained, the North Victnamese had shifted course and opted to a military solution. He did not choose to acknowledge that the intelligence to there had been a chance for a negotiated settlement up until 27 April, where Meeting with newsmen in the final hours of the airlift, Kissinger insisted the The cover-up and the cosmeticizing of events began almost immediately illusion: the notion that there was a chance for a Vichy-type peace. was that he himself had contributed mightily to Martin and Kissinger's second could not resist taking verbal swipes at the Ambassador, intimating that This was true, of course, as far as it went. But what Polgar failed to mention Martin had never appreciated the gravity of the military situation, as he had. in fact only one significant difference between their separate accounts. Polest briefing of his own which essentially corroborated Kissinger's story. There was While still on board the USS Blueridge, Polgar gave an elaborate pro-

States (where his daughter was in school) until after the American presidential board, ordering him to say nothing to the press. He also made it clear to former singer acted promptly to forestall contradictions. He cabled Martin on ship President Thieu in Taiwan that he could expect no entry visa to the United Once the Administration had established its own slant on reality, Ker lesson in humility. Shortly after arriving in Guam several of the defeated In the meantime, other Vietnamese notables were given a devastating suffering from such an acute case of conjunctivitis he could not find his way no country any more." It was as if the Republic of Vietnam had never existed stars?" one of them asked. "No," the American replied. "You have no army, that the generals remove their uniforms. "Can't we at least keep our shoulder to a chair. Moments later an American naval officer marched in and demanded meeting in a wheelchair, and General Truong, the defender of Danang, was exhausted General Toan, the former MR 3 commander, was pushed into the ARVN generals were brought together in one of the old metal barracks. An at all.

Ċ

immediately to Thailand on "special assignment," to debrief journalists and refugees still trickling out of Vietnam.* When the U.S. naval task force docked in Manila on 5 May, I was flown served to highlight the failures of agency management. After a month I was takeover, and was instrumental in setting up a kind of underground railway appreciated at CIA headquarters. Some of the information I gathered only back into Vietnam to ferret out other refugees. My diligence, however, was not called home From my interviews I produced the first intelligence on the Communist mistakes. I was told no one was interested in anything so "controversial." to do a real "damage assessment" so that the agency could learn from its in effect attributed the breakdown of the evacuation to "local enemy action." Asia Division. Like all returnees, I was directed to fill out an affidavit which two and a half years) and was "processed in" through Ted Shackley's East I refused to sign it. Instead I went from office to office, asking for permission I reached CIA headquarters in August after a brief vacation (my first in evacuation or on the personalities or documents left behind. one ranking official in Shackley's division ever bothered to question him on the Polgar, meanwhile, was quickly shunted off into a new assignment. Not my own old "home" office. Out of sympathy for my predicament, Polgar fellow CIA "analysts" when I returned to Langley and could find no job in invited me to accompany him to his own next posting abroad. I agreed and was immediately placed in special language training Having spent so much time overseas, I was virtually unknown to my evacuation to a "cleared" audience of State Department officers. He was August the Foreign Service Institute invited Polgar to deliver a lecture on the days. When Shackley learned of it he was furious. into a full-fledged commentary on what had taken place during Saigon's final unable to oblige, but asked me to stand in for him. I did so, turning the briefing But soon several things happened to cause me to reconsider. In mid-

My reassignment was not without complications. So confused had the evacuation been, the CIA lost track of me between Manila and Bangkok. Before thinking to consult the cable traffic to pinpoint my whereabouts, agency officials contacted my parents to tell them I was missing in action. The error was not corrected for several days.

to the standard of the standar completed an assessment of its own. were "leaking" to the press before either the CIA or the State Departmen to what I remembered. Nor could I understand why Administration of the state of the me. His version of the truth, as he spun it out that evening, bore little real briefing two journalists, both Kissinger favorites, on the evacuation and collapse, and he wanted to refresh his memory. I was appalled at what he aspects of Hanoi's military strategy. He confided he was in the process polite chitchat Lehmann pulled me aside and began questioning me on as Wolfgang Lehmann and was treated to another shock. After a few minu Soon afterward, at a cocktail party for old "Vietnam hands," I निक् protect its image, the CIA in effect was jeopardizing the few secrets that compilation of our top-secret reporting from Vietnam, a document which do survived the collapse. explicitly with both our intelligence "sources" and "methods." In its zeal to up the agency's role in the evacuation, and provided the journalist with next week or so Vietnam specialists in the State Department and the Pentagon likewise. Colby and two top assistants met with one of them, attempted to de were directed to open their files (selectively) to the two newsmen. The CIA KAR I soon discovered that Lehmann's briefing was only the beginning. In quality—that might have put the South Vietnamese government in an unfavo Polgar had at times blocked reports—on the grounds of poor sourcing of the polynomial of the polynomia pressing for a thorough review of what had gone wrong. I acknowledged the on Polgar's reporting habits and biases. Despite my personal feelings Polgar, I felt I had no choice but to be candid, particularly since I had be called in by the CIA's Inspector General and asked to provide "backgrown mortal blow. Several former Saigon Station officers, myself included, In early fall my confidence in my colleagues and superiors suffered as "too complicated." He explained that his own inquiry was meant simply could be spread around, as it should be. But my interviewer rejected the project into CIA activities in Vietnam. give Colby "ammunition" with which to fend off any Congressional prof accounting of the Station's performance in the final days so that the "blatt As my interview drew to a close, I asked to be allowed to file a if I had to go "outside" to do so. write a damage assessment on my own, whether the agency liked it or not, ev His remarks confirmed all of my grimmest suspicions. I resolved then to choice jobs to members of Martin's immediate entourage to keep them content time, the White House and the State Department parceled out honors and the participants could talk to newsmen without authorization. In the mean paign, then promptly slapped a classified label on the project so that none contracted several former Saigon generals to write a history of the final cars do what it could to blank Vietnam out of the public memory. The Pentago Throughout the fall and winter of 1975 the Administration continue assigned to plush administrative posts in Paris. stemming from his pneumonia, was given a presidential citation. Lehmann was designated Consul General in Frankfurt, and Boudreau and Jazynka were —and silent. Martin himself, briefly hospitalized as the result of complications at this, claiming that there were simply "too many." As a result, prior to izers of the luncheon group "conspirators," for their services during the crisis Department union, cited both Lionel Rosenblatt and Craig Johnstone, organgiven any recognition at all. The Foreign Service Association, in effect the State level State Department officers who had taken part in the evacuation were Gerald Ford's defeat in the 1976 presidential elections, only two of the middlerewarded as well. But Martin and Lehmann (with Kissinger's support) balked officers whose diligence and imagination had actually saved the evacuation be Several Kissinger associates suggested that the young State Department acuity during the final month of the war. citation which accompanied my own Medal of Merit applauded my analytical variety of classified medals—secret awards for secret accomplishments. The veterans together in the CIA's bubble-shaped auditorium and handed out a in Asia. In late December 1975 agency management called other Vietnam created to defend the agency against Congressional inquiries, and "Custer," abandoned both employees and documents, was elevated to the staff Colby with deserts. "Howard Archer," the former Base Chief in Nha Trang who had "heroes," though at times it gave less than due attention to matching rewards his counterpart from Danang, was named Chief of an important CIA Station The CIA, to its credit, was more generous in honoring its Vietnam larly the Phoenix and pacification programs, which he suggested would have and service and vigorously defended American policies in Vietnam, particuwon the war had it not been for the North Vietnamese army. I sat there, thought I was serving. listening to this nonsense and wondering what had happened to the CIA I had In his remarks at the ceremony Colby commended us all for our sacrifice agency's blessings and help. Carver gave me no encouragement. Not long superior that I was resigning in protest afterward I was summoned to the office of the CIA's chief legal counsel and Report, that I would like to write a book on the cease-fire period, with the diaries I might have kept while in Vietnam. That evening, three weeks after classified information to the press, and to turn over any personal notes or listener, the other the accuser. My motives and my integrity were impugned put through a classic interrogation, one interviewer playing the sympathetic the CIA had given me one of its highest awards, I announced to my immediate I was ordered to submit to a lie-detector test to "ensure" I had leaked no A few days later I advised George Carver, co-author of the Weyand colleagues. Memos advising everyone not to talk with me were circulated around the headquarters building, as if I were on the verge of betraying Once I had severed my ties, CIA officials tried to discredit me with former

· un Person

Internal Hemorrhaging

a former girl friend, were called in, interrogated and threatened with firing national secrets. CIA officials who had known or worked with me, including the impression that Kissinger, Polgar and Congress had all been responsib finger at anyone, he said just enough to obscure his own mistakes and to conv on the fiasco. It was a masterful performance. Without pointing an accusati International Relations Committee to offer his first extended public comm January 1976 Ambassador Martin appeared before members of the Hor Meanwhile, public discussion of Saigon's demise flared briefly. On-for Saigon's collapse and for the problems surrounding the evacuation. As Martin later explained to me, his testimony was carefully calculated en appear de la composition de la comp

His testimony to Congress, so subtle yet pointed in its insinuations, was his a little "insane." Now the Ambassador was determined to have his revenge by his account, had even spread rumors around Washington that Martin was letting him take all the blame for what had gone sour in Vietnam. Kissinger felt the Administration had ignored and even slighted him in recent month Despite the presidential citation, and the awards for his top subordinates, always embellishing on the notion that he had done "one hell of a job" if easily appeased. He began talking with me and various journalists at length assistant," as if to subdue him through kindness. But Martin would not be so The maneuver paid off. Soon afterward Kissinger appointed him "special special special challenged the Administration's line on the collapse. marked the first time any former Embassy officer had openly and for the record I agreed. The resulting newspaper story, headlined "Saigon's Secrets Lost," intelligence files intact. Since the CIA had been unwilling to give me a hearing sures, particularly Dung's assertion that NVA forces had captured many who had long known me, called and asked if I would comment on the disclopublished his memoirs, indirectly confirming many of the Embassy's mistakes came to a head. In the spring of 1976 the NVA commander, General Dung. and misjudgments in Saigon's final days. A journalist for the Washington Past, While Martin jockeyed for advantage, my own problems with the CLA He also quietly squirreled away secret papers to buttress his case.

able legality, since the National Security Acts rule out any domestic police suggest that the CIA assign a "case officer" to look over my shoulder, as if were a foreign spy. The action was not only an insult to me, it was of question comments to the press as "tendentious," and George Carver went so far as to tion officials. Assistant Secretary Habib, in a memo to Kissinger, described my From that point on I was a public enemy in the eyes of some Administracrazy." He also attempted to put a favorable gloss on his own performance during the evacuation, even to the point of claiming credit for the rescue of patriotism for daring to criticize the agency and intimated that I was "a little threaten me. During our meeting my old mentor accused me of a lack of Finally, in the summer of 1976, Polgar was called home to lecture and > somewhat melancholy note, our conversation ended. I never saw Polgar again. whom in fact Bill Johnson had evacuated over Polgar's objections. On this the 1,000 Vietnamese employees of House 7, the clandestine radio station open the way to more candid dealings. they knew nothing. Soon afterward, whether by coincidence or not, Hanoi coming with the United States on the issue of American servicemen missing in Hanoi and requested that as a gesture of good will they arrange for the provided Washington with the list of twelve missing servicemen that was to in the United States, particularly the apathy toward Vietnam, about which in action and provided them with some information on current public attitudes abandoned in Saigon. In a more general vein I urged them to be more forth-Embassy. I asked them to convey a list of questions from me to General Dung return of some of Ambassador Martin's household belongings, which he had book. Among others, I talked with officials of the Vietnamese Communist Several weeks later I traveled to Paris to seek background material for my trouble the CIA stepped up its harassment tactics against me. incentive to ease up on their treatment of those we had left behind. For my erate official contacts with Hanoi, if only to provide the Communists with an ment of my activities and pleaded with friends in the Administration to accel-When I returned home I informed both the CIA and the State Depart-right to censor me in the name of security or national interest. cially leak to the press to whitewash its role in Vietnam, it had forfeited the manuscript to the agency for clearance and censorship, as all former emcase officer the agency had assigned to me. I also resolved not to submit my ployees-turned-author are required to do. In my view, if the CIA could offideal candidly with the Vietnam issue, I eventually stopped meeting with the Because of its continued assaults on my integrity, and its reluctance to where it languished. however, some of Martin's old enemies managed to tie it up in committee continued his quest for public vindication. At his insistence, the White House nominated him in the fall of 1976, just prior to the presidential elections, the post of ambassador-at-large. Once the proposal was submitted to Congress, While I struggled over draft after draft of my book, Graham Martin even in this moment of magnanimity Martin could not quite divest himself of on he could only reconcile himself to the prospect of retirement.* He made Department officers from Saigon be finally recognized for their services. Yet Administration he recommended to Kissinger that some of the young State one last effort, however, to refurbish his image. In the final days of the Ford the prejudices and parochialism that had so marred his management of the The presidential elections wrote an end to Martin's hopes, and from then Many of those he recommended for citation were old proteges

*Two of Martin's severest critics rose to top posts in the Carter Administration. Habib was appointed Undersecretary of State—the second highest position in the State Department—and Dick Moose, co-author of the Moose-Micssner report for the Senate Foreign Relations Commit-

and the second of the second s

Internal Hemorrhaging

field, Don Hays and countless others who were equally deserving did not be seen that the second seco Brunson McKinley, Al Francis and several of Francis' own subordinates from Danang were given the State Department's highest award for valor. Month myself, immediately set to work to rectify this injustice. Eventually, the in-Several State Department officers, encouraged and aided by outsiders himself. He had called me that morning and asked me to visit him in his office on the top floor of the State Department. afternoon in late February 1977—appropriately, in the presence of Marig awardees was expanded to include Moorefield, Hays and many others. My own Vietnam adventure effectively came to an end on a Price sitting at the man's elbow for over four years, I knew all his arguments and finished, an hour and a half had passed—but I had hardly written a note. After tion on all his actions and decisions in Saigon's final days. By the time he had our many previous interviews, attempting as usual to put a favorable construcfor my book. He then proceeded to review much of what we had discussed in ment, he told me, and he wanted to make sure that I had the facts "straigh motioned me to the couch facing his desk. It was his last day in the Depart Saigon in the summer of 1973. Weary, his face parched and old, Martin swashbuckling diplomat I remembered from those exciting first encounters in The specter who greeted me at the door was merely a shadow of the didn't even give me a farewell luncheon." more ceremony. After all my years here in the Department, my colleagues country preacher over forty years ago, and today I'm leaving it without any here almost as I came in. I was sworn into government service by an old momentarily in the tired, dull eyes. "You know," he said, "I'm going out of during our interviews suddenly vanished, and a look of sadness flickered As he stood up to usher me out, the intensity he had always displayed my mind, the face became a mask again. I shook his hand and left. Was he still the consummate actor, playing for effect? Before I could make up I stared at him a moment, not quite sure whether to smile or sympathize an illusory if brilliant light, darting from point to point but altering very little tribute to him. "He was a lot like American policy in Vietnam," my friend had alter anything he wanted. But in fact he was much more akin to swamp fire said. "He saw himself as an old swamp fox, able through wit and cunning to leagues had said about Martin. It seemed only too apropos, a kind of final I remembered as I walked to the elevator what one of my former col-ill-advised from the very beginning, they could only have produced a Commisupported was destined to end as it did, that our policies were so flawed and There are some who say that the Vietnam the Americans nurtured and While I cannot in conscience defend those policies, I reject such logic. As forces at work can alter their direction. taken at appropriate moments on the basis of accurate information might have a former intelligence officer I must believe, perhaps naïvely, that right decisions toward certain events, nothing is predetermined and men who understand the find favor among many Vietnamese, both North and South. For it is one of averted the outcome, or at least have modified it. This view would undoubtedly he ancient tenets of their culture that while there may be a predisposition the Kennedy and Johnson Administrations before him. deference to sensitivities and frustrations that traced back to the mistakes of as quickly as possible, and if Kissinger erred in obliging them, he did so in that? The American people wanted out of Vietnam under any circumstances, the forces at work in Vietnam as it emerged from the cease-fire. He negotiated his handiwork was faulty and too hastily done. But was he to be blamed for the "peace" and shaped American policies in the aftermath. In both instances Clearly, Henry Kissinger was the American who most directly affected of these policies and premises would be destroyed by Watergate. ness. But he could not have known at the time that the very underpinnings Soviet and Chinese cooperation and in the efficacy—and continued availability of American aid to Saigon as a shield against North Vietnamese aggressive-Following the cease-fire, Kissinger erred again by placing his trust in own attention became diverted by the Middle East and other problems, Washoversight responsibility for Vietnam to his subordinates. Consequently, as his mined to do just about everything himself, he failed to delegate any real boiled over, there was only one perspective on it—Graham Martin's. ington lost sight, and control, of its most enduring crisis. By the time the crisis his way of doing business, his penchant for the virtuoso performance. Detertwo fit clearly into the category of "all his own." One of them stemmed from Of all of Kissinger's mistakes in the realm of Vietnam policy, perhaps only it moved to circumscribe the President's war-making powers in reaction to Watergate. been, Congress at least would have known what was at stake in Victnam as to Congress for approval, like the peace treaty it was supposed to be. If it had the cease-fire period was that the Paris agreement had never been submitted his imperfect peace. Martin once remarked to me that the greatest tragedy of with Congress or the American people about what was essential to preserving Then, too, Kissinger, with his addiction to secrecy, never quite leveled dor was able to shift course in time, in the direction of compromise. On the dependence on the United States, and when finally the bombing was halted and strengthened the South Vietnamese in their own intransigence and in their did his job too well-and too long. His hard-line views, a reflection of Nixon's, Saigon in the wake of the cease-fire to make sure that Kissinger's peace did what occurred in the end. The Administration's stalking horse, he was sent to not become the ticket for a Communist takeover. His "mistake" was that he Nixon succumbed to his own excesses, neither the protégés nor the Ambassa-Next to Kissinger, Martin must of course bear primary responsibility for contrary, Martin through manipulation and force of will tried to create an illusion of continued support in Washington to stiffen Thieu's back, only to drive him further into his stubbornness and misapprehension. Martin erred in this, to be sure. But was he to blame? If he continued to try to remold reality in the image of what he thought it should be, it was because Kissinger and eventually President Ford were only too willing to share his illusions.

人名英格兰 医阿克里氏 医多种

the past had already been forgotten at the top levels of our government. been tolerated in their most self-defeating policies. It was as if the lessons of sador had overdrawn the prospects for success; and our protégés in Saigon had mistakes and omissions that had plunged us into Vietnam in the first place had who must answer for Saigon's demise and for the way it happened. Not the been replayed in miniature. Two Presidents had misled Congress; the Ambasthe time General Dung's forces moved on Saigon in April 1975 many of the continue pursuing policies and tactics that had already been brought into placency and indifference among us that enabled a few very powerful men to foreign policy establishment itself also took its toll on the population at large, that "gone-with-the-wind" syndrome that eventually afflicted much of the barbarity of the American involvement. But once the boys had come home, the Vietnam war to its first tentative conclusion and forced an end to the least of these are the American people themselves. True, the sense of revulsion question. The consequences of our forgetfulness should be a warning, for by sweeping Vietnam from our collective consciousness and giving rise to a comthat spread through the country in the late 1960s and early '70s helped to bring Beyond the phalanx of known names and reputations, there are others

Hopefully, with the passage of time and healing of the national trauma inflicted by the war, we will be able to give history its due, a complete and unflinching retrospective, extending beyond the platitudes and recriminations that till now have blinded so many of us to what actually happened to Vietnam, and to ourselves, in the two years following the Paris peace agreement. If we fail to seize the opportunity, and continue to treat Vietnam as an aberration, painfully remembered and best forgotten, particularly in its death throes, then we cannot hope to escape the kind of leadership both in the intelligence field and in the policy-making arena that made Saigon's "decent interval" such an indecent end to this American tragedy.

In