Dear both,

When I wrote your ^{sis.} Laura Langlie on October 27 on receipt of the proofs of the book with the agreed-to title of SELECTIONS FROM WHITEWASH and saw that you have in violation of two agreements nonetheless titled it WHITEWASH, I then notified you through her that this violates our agreements and asked for assurances in writing that the title would be corrected. When I got to reading and correcting the uncorrected proofs you sent me to read and correct and saw that you also carry the title you have no right to use, WHITEWASH, ^{on} and all even-numbered pages I again notified you through her when I sent the first batch of proofs back that you do not have the right to use the title WHITEWASH and asked for confirmation of this promptly in writing. I mailed that by Priority Mail that I took into the Post Office to speed it up this past Saturday. I was home all day today except at lunchtime and I got no phone call ~~confirmation~~ ^{confirmation} that you would write me to that effect. I therefore herewith notify you that you do not have the right to title this book WHITEWASH and that I do not and will not agree to that.

The proofs reflect another violation of an agreement reached twice, to ~~the~~ ^{the} norm, that the book would ~~include~~ include the list of my JFK assassination books and my address so that those reading the Selections and desiring the unabridged books would know how to obtain them.

This norm was also omitted from the reprint of my Frame-Up.

I'll write Richard Gallen further about this tomorrow.

I am sorry that, as Mr. Carroll knows, my typing cannot be any better.

This will be included in the tomorrow's ^{return} ~~return~~ of the remaining proofs, also by Priority Mail, which should speed your receipt of it.

I note also that what I believe ^{is the norm} ~~is the norm~~, in the printing of selections not a single selection is identified. This serves to convey what the unauthorized title does say, that you are publishing a book titled WHITEWASH.

You do not have the right to do that.

Because you sent me uncorrected proofs it caused me much additional work and time to try to identify what you were selecting so I could check the existing mistakes because the ~~ms~~ proofs were uncorrected proofs. I also tried to correct the numerous typographical errors. I am not certain that I caught all the errors. I have no way of knowing whether the originate in the copy set in type.

Harold Weisberg
Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
