PERSONAL FOULS

The Broken Promises and Shattered Dreams of Big Money College Basketball at
North Carolina State

Peter Golenbock

Acclaimed sportswriter Peter Golenbock has written five national bestsellers including the extraordinarily successful The Bronx Zoo. Here he tells the most explosive, tragic and compelling story yet about sports in America.

This book could have been written about any one of two dozen colleges with major athletic programs. Peter Golenbock has chosen to explore the inner workings of big-time college athletics by focusing on the basketball program at North Carolina State University. The Wolfpack was selected because their program best illustrates some of the conditions that characterize amateur sports in America.

North Carolina State is renowned for its basketball team—NCAA National Champions in 1983 and ACC Champions in 1987. Jim Valvano, the head coach since 1980, is famous, admired and rich—year after year recruiting the top high school players in the country. But beneath this successful image lies the reality of a multi-million dollar business. Personal Fouls reveals, for the first time, the devastating truth, the broken dreams, the human cost behind the glory.

Personal Fouls was a difficult book to write. Many people did not want to see it published. But as painful, shocking and moving as the story is, it could only have been told, in all its rich and remarkable detail, by a writer who is as courageous as he is talented.

Personal Fouls is as funny as it is scary, as entertaining as it is revealing. It is one of those special, disturbing books that once read will not be forgotten.

PETER GOLENBOCK is the author of the bestsellers The Bronx Zoo, Dynasty, Burns, Number 1, and Balls. He lives in Connecticut.

THE KIWI TARGET

John Ball

Combining scrupulous attention to police procedure with thought-provoking plots and sympathetic characters, John Ball has not flattered since his memorable detective, Virgil Tibbs, appeared in 1965. In the Heat of the Night won an Edgar for best first novel and subsequently became an Oscar-winning film and is now a popular and critically acclaimed television show. Since then Mr. Ball's books, featuring a number of heroes in addition to Virgil Tibbs, have been consistently and deservedly popular.

In The Kiwi Target the scene is New Zealand. Three men arrive at the Auckland airport on the same day. Peter Ferguson and Ted Kinkaid, Americans and rivals, are both after the same block of stock, owned by a New Zealander who keeps his identity carefully hidden. Peter needs the stock to save his firm from an unfriendly takeover by the ruthless conglomerate, Pricane Industries; Ted needs the stock if he is to keep his job with Pricane.

But from outside the business world comes a wild card in the form of notorious hit man Edward Riley. Though recognized by a policeman at the airport, Riley disappears before he can be arrested. Peter is threatened by unknown enemies almost from the beginning, but the alertness and vigilance of the police allow him to continue his mission until he is confronted—openly by Kinkaid, and secretly and more viciously by the violent Riley.

JOHN BALL is a former journalist and, like Virgil Tibbs, a martial arts expert with a black belt in aikido. His books include Cool Cottonaid, Five Pieces of Jade, and Mark One—The Dummy.

THE TRIUMPH OF THE NIGHT

20th Century Ghost Stories

Edited by Robert Phillips

Who would have thought Graham Greene or John Updike or Tennessee Williams wrote about ghosts? Most all of the writers included here are not known for writing ghost stories. But that is only one of the many pleasures of this enthralling volume.

There are certain recurrent themes in these stories: haunted houses and rooms (Virginia Woolf), dead lovers (Elizabeth Bowen and Shirley Jackson), spectral children (Elizabeth Spencer), child visions (E. M. Forster and Mavis Galland), ghosts of the self (Henry James), first wives (Edith Wharton and Ellen Glasgow), evil spirits (Joyce Carol Oates), revenge (Louis Auchincloss) and love from beyond (William Goyen).

In the 20th century English-language ghost story there are no clinking chains and no howling demons. The horror comes from what Henry James called "the terror of the unusual." The ghosts, and they are frightening creatures, in these carefully selected stories often walk in daylight and appear in places where ghosts are not expected—behind the wheel of a car or in a London flea market. The writers achieve their startling effects by introducing the otherworldly into worldly settings.

These are stories that will make one's hair stand on end. But they will also, like all quality literature, expand the way one views things in this world.

ROBERT PHILLIPS has written fiction, poetry and has edited a number of anthologies including The Collected Stories of Noel Coward, The Letters of Delmore Schwartz and The Ego is Always Behind the Wheel. He also writes articles for The New York Times, The New Yorker, The Paris Review and many other magazines and journals.

DEATH IN HIGH HEELS

Christiana Brand

Christiana Brand's first mystery, Death in High Heels, brilliantly began the career of one of the greats of the Golden Age of detective fiction. Amusing, sly and utterly baffling, it is also a charming picture of a group of beautiful women determined to protect one another, in sharp contrast to the more usual depiction of women as locked in mortal combat over men or status.

When the highly susceptible Mr. Chatsworth is assigned by Scotland Yard to cover a murder in a dress shop, he is confronted with five delectable young women as suspects. He promptly loses his heart to one of them and is soon matching wits with all five—and losing.

"You have to reach for the greatest of the Great Names to find Brand's rivals in the subtleties of the trade."

"Top notch all the way."

—Herald Tribune

CHRISTIANNA BRAND wrote Death in High Heels in part for revenge on a vicious sales clerk in a dress shop where they worked together. Carroll & Graf has previously published her Green for Danger, Fog of Doubt, and Tour de Force.

THE ZAP GUN

Philip K. Dick

One of the few truly innovative science fiction writers in tune with the politics of his time, Philip K. Dick's The Zap Gun is a brilliant novel of cold war insanity.

A precarious stalemate in arms escalation leaves East and West caught in a chilling atmosphere where both nightmarish and hilarious ironies take place. Each side produces hideously destructive weapons invented by drug-taking designers who consider their "artifacts" divinely inspired. But even these creative minds—like the rest of the endangered populations—are mere pawns in a far stranger and duplicitous environment.

"There is a warmth, humanity and addictive humor that makes Dick a writer as American as Mark Twain." —Science Fiction & Fantasy

"Dick's books bubble with original ideas."

—Playboy

"Nobody notices that we have our own homegrown Borges and have had him for 30 years." —URSULA K. LEGUIN

PASSOVER

Foumiko Kometani

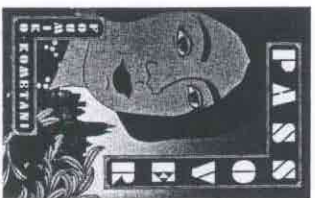

Translated by the author

This is the first English language edition of two award winning novellas. Their appearance here has been preceded by a controversy that will likely intensify upon publication.

When published in Japan, Passover received the Shincho award and A Guest from Afar won the Bungakai contest. Passover also won Japan's most prestigious literary prize, the Akatagawa Award. The trade edition, combining the two fictions, sold over 120,000 copies.

Passover is the story of a Japanese woman who left her homeland to escape family and gender restrictions that stifled her attempt to become an artist. Now in America for two decades, married and with two children, she has learned that she has only replaced one set of oppressive cultural rules for another. The struggle for personal freedom and intellectual integrity will always remain her own responsibility. This profound conflict is dramatized when she spends the Passover holiday with her husband's family. This clash of cultures takes shape between a Japanese woman and a Jewish family but it could as easily occur between virtually any two ethnic groups.

A Guest from Afar is the moving account of what happens to a family when a handicapped child comes home for his first visit after having been institutionalized. The child has become a guest in his own home and his presence forces the family to confront an old wound that, despite the child's absence, has not healed.

Advance critical comments:

"Kometani captures life in all its complexity. Her heroine is not only a foreigner formed by destiny but a vivid human being who finds expression as a character in fiction. She has extracted an essence here and that essence is literature."

—ETO JUN, Mfitchi

"Kometani's heroine seeks to escape the traditional marriage traps that face every Japanese woman. However, ironically, by marrying an American Jew she falls into an intricate and even more tangled kind of snare. And it is these circumstances that she depicts with a fresh and rare humanity."

—JUNOSUKE YOSHIYUKI, Bungei Shinju

"A sensitive story . . . the pathos and horror of life's ordeals are described perfectly. Insights and opinions are rendered adroitly but always with telling humor. The result is invigorating . . . an excellent work of art."

—TSUTOMU MIZUGAMI, Bungei Shinju

FOUMIKO KOMETANI is a Japanese painter and writer. She lives in Los Angeles.

A DEATH IN A TOWN

Hillary Waugh

This season Carroll & Graf is pleased to add to our list an author of the stature of Hillary Waugh, the 1989 Grand Master of the Mystery Writers of America. His newest novel, A Death in a Town is a stunningly realistic novel about the aftermath of a heinous crime—its shattering effect on the innocent.

Who was the "respectable" citizen who had raped and murdered the pretty young babysitter? The effort to track down the criminal is presented through the words and thoughts of the police and the town selectmen. Sally Anders is brought to life through the responses of her friends, her parents and her brother. And along the way her one secret is cruelly exposed. Then there is the anger and pain of those on whom suspicion falls, whose lives are subject to destructive gossip with devastating results. Revealing insight into human nature, both good and bad, gives added suspense to this complex, unusual novel and fuels the final shift toward justice.

In acknowledgement of Mr. Waugh's continuing popularity Carroll & Graf will also release a number of his earlier books in mass market format, beginning this season with Sleep Long, My Love.

HILARY WAUGH is the author of over 40 novels, including the classic Last Seen Wearing and the enduringly popular 30 Manhattan East.

GREAT CAT TALES

Edited by Lesley O'Mara
With a foreword by Beryl Reid

Anyone who has ever shared a home with a cat knows how charming, lovable and unpredictable they can be. It is not surprising that they have provided the inspiration for stories by some of the world's finest writers. This collection represents the cream of cat stories, chosen for cat lovers by cat lovers. Included are stories by James Herriot, P. G. Wodehouse, Damon Runyon, Doris Lessing, Patricia Highsmith, Emile Zola and many others. The cats in this volume are as varied as those in real life: comic, heroic, spoiled, fat—there is even a desert island cat!

Since we all know that cats always land on their feet, each story in this volume has a happy ending. Nowhere is poor puss left abandoned to fend for herself, for here she always comes out best, no matter how horrible or selfish her owner.

The delightful line drawings, specially commissioned for this volume, provide the perfect accompaniment to the twenty stories in Great Cat Tales.

LESLIE O'MARA is an editor and publisher of a British publishing house. In addition to this volume she has edited many anthologies including The Book of Animal Stories.

BERYL REID is an actress best known for her starring role in The Killing of Sister George for which she won a Tony Award. She has appeared in many films (such as Entertaining Mr. Sloan) and television shows (such as Smiley's People). She is the author of The Cats Whiskers.

THE COACHMAN RAT

David Henry Wilson

Best known for his plays and childrens books, in The Coachman Rat David Henry Wilson transforms the fairy tale for adults. He refashions the psychological roots of the old tales and develops them into a provocative fable for our times—a meditation on man's ability to learn and to tolerate, enlivened by gripping action and a profound wit. The Coachman Rat is not simply a new-styled fairy tale, but a topical and original look at reality.

A woman wreathed in white light turns a rat into a coachman. The coachman drives a young girl to the prince's ball—but when the clock strikes twelve a strange animal runs down the palace steps—a rat with a human voice. This lost and anguished creature sets in motion a tragic chain of events that culminates in a bloody war between rats and men.

The Coachman Rat was first published in West Germany. Here are a few of the many enthusiastic German reviews.

"Profound and often humorous with that understanding characteristic of those who view their literary creativity not least as a means of delving into the secrets of human existence. One of those magical books that one might pick up when memories of childhood merge with experience of passing time."
—Bruckebauer

"A gripping and thought-provoking fairy tale about otherness, about love, about humanity and truthfulness which should appeal both to children and to adults."
—Wiener Zeitung

"A ray of sunshine in the commercial jungle:
entertainment with depth."
—Buchjournal

DAVID HENRY WILSON'S plays have been produced throughout England, America, and Northern Europe. His enormously popular Jeremy James books have been translated into several languages.

THE ART OF SENSUAL LOVING

This is a book that will enhance lovemaking abilities and skills. The Art of Sensual Loving shows how to increase awareness and expression of sexual pleasure for individuals and couples.

Dr. Stanway's approach is to consider sex as much in terms of love and romance as in terms of technique. It is time, he is convinced, to return to the joys of courtship, intimacy and seduction. And it is essential to improve skills in these areas if one wants to ensure a committed, sexually-fulfilling long-term relationship.

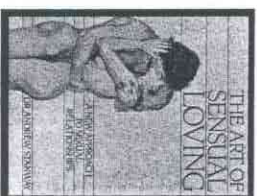

The frank and informative text is perfectly complimented by 50 sensitive and beautifully rendered illustrations in color.

DR. ANDREW STANWAY has written twenty-eight books about medicine and health including A Woman's Guide to Men and Sex published last year by Carroll & Graf.

HELLO AMERICA

J. G. Ballard

Published to wide critical appreciation last year in hardcover, Ballard's entertaining satire on America's legendary icons and power figures blends science fiction and fantasy as only the author of Empire of the Sun knows how.

On a perilous journey to rediscover America a century after the climactic upheavals of the 1990's, an Apollo team encounters all manner of hazards and ghosts from the past as they travel West. Then, in Las Vegas, they stumble upon a gigantic electronic oasis governed by a William Burroughs look-alike who is addressed reverently as President Charles Manson. When Manson threatens to play deadly games with leftover Titan nuclear missiles, it is not only the John Wayne, Frank Sinatra and Marilyn Monroe holograms that are at stake.

"It's a lot of fun. Ballard is having a rollicking time of it."

—Washington Post Book World

"Ballard's sword slices deep into the heart of American pop culture."

—Houston Post

"Hello America is further evidence of Ballard's standing as one of the most original voices in 20th century fiction."

—The Coast Book Review Service

CROSSFIRE:

The Plot that Killed Kennedy

Jim Marrs

Jim Marrs, a veteran journalist, here pulls together for the first time all the available facts concerning that tragic day in November 1963. Marrs has spoken at length with key figures and numerous police, government and news media officials involved in the case. Now, after more than 20 years, he sifts through theories and rumors to give a clear and concise overview of what really happened, including new and fascinating evidence on Lee Harvey Oswald's political background.

Backed up by abundant photos, Marrs examines first the "kill zone" (the motorcade, the Texas Book Repository, the Crassy Knoll) before going on to discuss "means, motives and opportunities." These include disturbing connections with the FBI, CIA, the Mafia, the Cubans and the American military among others. New light is also shed on J. Edgar Hoover's close friendship with Lyndon Johnson and the latter's unpredictable behavior after the assassination. Then the author evaluates the Warren Commission findings and contrasts them with the House Select Committee on Assassinations which boldly refuted the lone gunman theory. Marrs also explores the "convenient deaths" after the killing, deaths which few Americans know about.

The facts and photographic evidence presented in this startling book make it a necessary addition to the library of anyone with the slightest interest in learning what actually happened in Dallas at a time when Americans in large numbers began to be openly cynical about their government's respect for the truth. Crossfire is a disturbing book which—by its very thoroughness—questions and provides answers to crucial aspects of the crime that have long been taken for granted.

JIM MARRS teaches an assassination course at the University of Texas. He is also an award-winning freelance author, photographer and script writer.

BAD GIRLS OF THE SILVER SCREEN

Lottie Da and Jan Alexander
With an introduction by Kenneth Anger

This lavishly illustrated large format book is the first to explore in words and pictures the history of wicked roles played by actresses in American cinema. From the silent films of the Nickelodeon right up to the box office hits of the 80s, the authors tell us how the "bad girl" stereotype first emerged from the urban slums of the early 1900s and later established itself as a permanent feature of a deviant middle class.

Focusing on the most famous actresses of the twentieth century, Bad Girls of the Silver Screen shows how women were perceived (and misperceived) in the popular imagination and how this perception was molded and magnified by screenwriters and directors.

Among the many actresses discussed are: Joan Crawford, Greta Garbo, Marilyn Monroe, Jane Mansfield, Betty Grable, Lana Turner, Ingrid Bergman, Jane Fonda, Jodie Foster and Glenn Close. The films include such classics as Vamp, Crime and Punishment, Anna Christie, Fifth Avenue Girl, How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, Millonaire, Mata Hari, Ima La Douce, Double Indemnity, The Postman Always Rings Twice, Midnight Cowboy, Shafq, Taxi Driver and the recent hits Criminals of Passion, Working Girls and Fatal Attraction. In these and scores of other films, actresses have portrayed mistresses, harlots, white slaves, vampires, cheating wives, courtesans and Park Avenue call girls, all temptresses of the silver screen who have shaped sexual mores and fashions.

The authors—along with Kenneth Anger's probing introduction—provide new angles and insights into Hollywood casting, screenwriting and performance backed up by a wealth of newly available photos on a subject that has never before been adequately dealt with.

LOTTIE DA is Media Director for the National Task Force on Prostitution. She has created a video special on Bad Girls of the Silver Screen and has lectured on campuses across the country on the history of prostitution.

JAN ALEXANDER is a former reporter of Money magazine. She is currently a writer and book editor and has written articles in such magazines as Sassy, Ms., and Family Circle.

CHEKHOV'S JOURNEY

Ian Watson

Never before published in the United States, Chekhov's Journey is one of the most imaginative of Ian Watson's science fiction novels. It confirms his position in the front ranks of contemporary British writers and his status—in J.G. Ballard's view—as the most interesting science fiction writer of ideas.

Here he writes about a Soviet film unit's latest venture to hypnotize an actor so that he does not just play the role of Anton Chekhov but actually "reincarnates" him. But what they didn't bank on was Chekhov's vivid imagination and memories. Deep in a trance, the actor recalls that Chekhov knew about the 1908 Tunguska explosion back in 1890. This evidence of clairvoyance baffles the film crew even more when it is associated with the Soviet space program that has become so technologically advanced that the Film Unit at Krasnoyarsk begins to function very strangely indeed.

From the British Reviews:

"The author's method of plating separate accounts into one knot of conclusion works beautifully. . . . Ultimately it all leads to a delightful, soulful generalization of a very Russian kind."
—The Times

"One of the most ingenious plots I've encountered in a very long while. Watson unites the strands of his mystery with perfect clarity."
—City Limits

IAN WATSON received enormous critical acclaim for his novel The Embedding which Carroll & Graf also publishes this season. He is a British Science Fiction Award winner and has been features editor of the journal Foundation since 1975 and a full time writer since 1976.

GHOSTS FOR CHRISTMAS

Edited by Richard Dalby

Thirty Christmas ghosts from such superb story tellers as Charles Dickens, J. Sheridan Le Fanu, Robert Louis Stevenson, Algernon Blackwood, J.M. Barrie, J.B. Priestley, L.P. Hartley, and Ramsey Campbell. Spanning a century and a half, from 1836 to 1987, the stories are presented with brief biographical and bibliographical notes.

It was Charles Dickens who most firmly identified ghost stories with the Christmas season, beginning with "The Story of the Goblins who Stole a Sexton" which led eventually to A Christmas Carol. But the association is much older than that. What could be more natural in the long dark nights of winter, with the wind howling, than to gather around the fire and exchange weird stories, to conjure into consciousness the creepy spirits lurking in the shadows beyond the firelight—and so to exorcise them.

Dickens preferred stories with a humorous edge, ghosts which would "not put my readers out of humour with themselves, with each other, with the season, or with me." The horrors of L.P. Hartley, in contrast, are rather less gentle and much more lethal. Every kind of Christmas creepy is included here, from bumps in the night to poltergeists and Demon Kings. This is a surprising mixture of the classic and modern, the familiar and the unknown.

Advance praise:

"A bumper collection of classic stories to haunt Christmas."
—The Sunday Times

RICHARD DALBY is one of Britain's leading authorities on ghost stories. He is the editor of Victorian Ghost Stories by Eminent Women Writers, published by Carroll & Graf last season, as well as The Virago Book of Ghost Stories, The Sorceress in Stained Glass, Dracula's Blood and Ghosts and Scholars.

DEADLY PROMISE

Mignon F. Ballard

A strong sense of place is an important facet in the work of the great mystery writers. Agatha Christie's novels, for example, are grounded in English village life; Dick Francis places us squarely into the race track milieu; and we live with Travis McGee on the Florida waterfront in John D. MacDonald's books. Much of the tension comes from the conflict between a safe and secure, or at least familiar, place—home—and its invasion by mortal danger.

Mignon F. Ballard perfectly evokes the lives and surroundings of Southern women in small-town America, a sympathetic place that we would like to know and, for the moment at least, to live in. Murder in this context is more shocking, more threatening, than murder in the drug-choked streets of the Bronx.

Molly Stonehouse, on a holiday visit to her late husband Ethan's aunts, suspects that behind the festive facade in the small Georgia town of Harmony a dangerous drama is taking place. Scary incidents during the caroling parties and rifle fire during a country hunt for a Christmas tree strengthen her belief that Ethan's death was not an accident. His killer could be a family friend. Perhaps even a relative. When her husband was a child he and his boyhood chum Neil had a secret they promised each other never to reveal. Now Neil and Ethan were both dead and Molly is afraid she is next!

MIGNON F. BALLARD lives with her husband in Fort Mills, South Carolina. She is the author of Cry at Dusk and Raven Rock.

John Rechy

In this brilliant fiction, John Rechy reinvents the life of Hollywood's most glamorous legend as he tells the enthralling story of a young woman's attempt to discover her heritage and the true identity of her parents. "A grand slam. A massive, magnetic story. Rechy is a major American novelist at the peak of his powers."

—San Francisco Chronicle

INNOCENCE

Penelope Fitzgerald

An effervescent comedy of manners and misunderstandings, the novel follows the affairs of a Florentine family of long lineage, eccentric habits and little money. "A satisfying and entertaining novel."

TWO COMPLETE NOVELS Cogan's Trade and A Choice of Enemies

George V. Higgins

Exceedingly funny, shocking, and incorruptibly true, together these two novels demonstrate why The New Yorker called Higgins "the Balzac of the Boston underworld."

A Choice of Enemies dissects the corruption of city and state politics. In this world the hero is simply the most cynical (and engaging) man around.

Cogan's Trade is about a small-time killer surviving in the petty, claustrophobic world of organized crime.

"Each book is in its own way a novel of manners, each reveals an impressive knowledge of Boston folkways, and each is exceedingly funny."

—The Washington Post Book World

"As funny as it is frightening . . . The fascination of the book is the unlocking of the modus operandi of a particularly nasty segment of society."

—The New York Times Book Review

GEORGE V. HIGGINS is a Boston lawyer and former reporter and prosecutor who knows the ins and outs of local politics first hand. Carroll & Graf has also published his A City on the Hill and Penance for Jerry Kennedy.

BLUE ANGEL SECRETS

Margarete von Falkensee

Blue Angel Secrets is the second novel written by the late author of the internationally acclaimed Blue Angel Nights. In this roman à clef, the steamy side of Hollywood in the 1930s is explored through the story of a young German actor whose good looks have not yet graced the screen but are already winning kids in that other arena in which he excels—the bedroom.

"A wicked and witty story . . . this thinly disguised fiction is as sophisticated as it is sexy."

—Die Stern

THE DOORS OPEN

Michael Gilbert

Michael Gilbert's suspense stories are invariably entertaining and always illuminating, whether the field is law, international relations or, as here, high finance. He brings the hitherto dry world of finance to comprehensible and fascinating life. Well drawn characters, lots of action, and unnerving suspense complete an irresistible mix for a book you can't put down.

Life had been good for Paddy Yeatman-Carter. First-class Ruggier and good beer at eightpence a pint before the war and then command of the finest regiment in the British Army. But peacetime life as an attache'd clerk is more than a bit dim—until he sees an attempted suicide and decides to intervene. That act of good nature costs him his job and plunges him into the deepest intrigues of the City, where he and his friends walk in the shadow of death.

"A convincing and warmly realistic suspense story."

BEYOND APOLLO

Barry Malzberg

Beyond Apollo, winner of the John Campbell Award for the best science fiction novel, is another fine example of Barry Malzberg's mastery of the genre.

Harry Evans is the lone survivor of the first Venus expedition, a space journey that went disastrously wrong. But no one knows the reason behind the tragedy. Was it a systems breakdown, or the result of mind-altering beings on the planet of love? As the world anxiously waits for the truth, Evans wrestles with dreams and fantasies, piecing together memories of primary sexual urges and an uncontrollable series of mental states.

Beyond the intrigue of the narrative this novel is a clever comment on the science fiction genre and the theme of "space imperialism."

"One of the most terrifying visions ever to come out of science fiction."

—ROBERT SILVERBERG

"Veins of gold . . . a beautiful and heart-breaking book."

BEYOND THE OCCULT

Colin Wilson

Twenty years after his first highly successful book on the subject, The Occult (1970), Colin Wilson sets out to prove that the picture of the world presented by investigators into the paranormal is as consistent and comprehensive as that of science.

Wilson begins with the human mind, and with vivid examples of its unseen powers: ESP, precognition, clairvoyance, psychokinesis, out-of-body experiences, and mystical occurrences of all kinds. From there he moves to profoundly mysterious phenomena—poltergeists, spirit possessions, reincarnations—that have convinced him of the reality of disembodied spirits.

Hundreds of fascinating glimpses into the universe of the paranormal are linked to the latest scientific thinking to support Wilson's powerful case: that our so-called "normal" experience may in fact be sub-normal, and that evolution may have brought us near to the edge of a quantum leap into a highly expanded human consciousness.

COLIN WILSON sprang to overnight fame with his remarkable first book The Outsider, which was a national best seller. Since then he has produced successful books in a wide variety of fields including The Misfits and The Mammoth Book of True Crime, both published by Carroll & Graf.

THE BLACK CABINET Superb Stories Based on Real Crimes

Edited and introduced by Peter Lovesey

Where do crime writers get their ideas? Usually out of their imaginations, triggered perhaps by a chance occurrence. But sometimes their stories are based on real crimes, and that is the case with the fifteen masterful stories presented here by Peter Lovesey, whose prize-winning novel The False Inspector Dew, selected by H.R.F. Keating for his Crime & Mystery: The 100 Best Books, was based on an actual case.

Lovesey leads off with a recounting by Abraham Lincoln of a weird murder mystery he encountered as a young lawyer in Springfield. Though it is a true story presented factually it is probably the strangest story in the collection. Other stories include Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's fictional solution to the mystery of the Marte Celeste, and Angela Carter's marvelous reconstruction of the hours—and the lives—that led to Lizzie Borden's mad murders. O'Henry, Aldous Huxley, Anthony Boucher and Osbert Sitwell complete what we may call the "period" portion of the book, with Lillian de la Torre's delightful Dr. Sam Johnson story "Mildly Bigamy," providing an engaging break before we move on to the modern era of murder.

Here, stories by Peter Lovesey, Roy Vickers, Jorge Luis Borges, Anthony Berkeley, and Miriam Allen De Ford provide a full measure of passion and horror, ending with Harlan Ellison's Edgar Award-winning story "The Whimper of Whipped Dogs," based on the murder of Kitty Genovese before the eyes of thirty-eight witnesses in Kew Gardens.

John Dickson Carr wraps up the book and brings it full circle with an historical extravaganza that gives this volume its name and is based on the murder of Abraham Lincoln!

PETER LOVESEY is best known as a writer of crime stories in period settings. In addition to The False Inspector Dew, his Bertie and the Tin Man is also based on a real crime, the death of the jockey, Fred Archer.

TOUCHING FIRE: Erotic Writings by Women

Edited by Louise Thornton, Jan Sturtevant and Amber Sumrall

This celebration of the erotic—both the emotional and sexual aspects—contains work by Margaret Atwood, Tess Gallagher, Maxine Kumin, Alice Munro, Marge Piercy, Carolyn Forché and Sharon Olds, as well as a number of other talented if lesser known writers.

A mixture of prose and poetry, Touching Fire is unlike any other anthology. It maintains a high level of literary quality without sacrificing its feminist perspective. The editors sought out and selected work that would represent a wide range of experience from childhood to old age. And, importantly, the book is not about power, domination and violence. Nor does it exclusively focus on the physical.

Touching Fire is a joyous, provocative salute to the life-affirming imagination. It says yes to sensuality, to desire, to passion. It is about the essential role eros plays in women's lives. The stories and poems which compose this volume reflect women's experience—painful and disappointing as well as hopeful and serene—as they praise the erotic and its power of transformation in all components of life.

LOUISE THORNTON has taught writing at several colleges in Northern California. Her book I Never Told Anyone: Writings by Women Survivors of Child Sexual Abuse was published by Harper & Row.

AMBER SUMRALL has published in numerous magazines and anthologies.

JAN STURTEVANT edits the poetry section of a Santa Cruz newspaper.

TRAITORS AND HEROES

This memoir by one of America's leading trial lawyers recounts several contemporary courtroom dramas where the state and the individual, politics and the rule of law starkly confront one another. The outcomes pull into focus one of the great issues of our time: human rights.

"These are fascinating stories, forthright, impassioned, informative and chilling."

FLESH AND BLOOD

François Mauriac

Translated by Gerard Hopkins

Winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1952, François Mauriac's Flesh and Blood is a powerful novel about three young rebellions and romantic individuals who form a secret bond of friendship. Set in rural France, the author charts their destinies and shows how the unbridled force of sensual passion can alternate—sometimes tragically—from exaltation to despair.

This novel shows once again that François Mauriac is one of the most persuasive voices of modern literature.

"Flesh and Blood is Mauriac's finest novel, a narrative as bold and compelling in its main outlines as a medieval woodcut, given depth and radiance by a mass of finely observed detail."

—The Times

"An authentic masterpiece that combines psychological profundity with rare perfection of style and form."

—Saturday Review

SLEEP LONG, MY LOVE

Hillary Waugh

Hillary Waugh, the new Grand Master of The Mystery Writers of America, virtually invented the police procedural. Here, in the tautly effective Sleep Long, My Love, are all the ingredients: a straight story line without subplots, the piling up of detail, the sense of realism—that this is what police really do. The heart of the story is not the capture but the hunt.

A deserted house, the pathetic torso of an unknown woman, no suspects. And Police Chief Fellows is embarked on a long hard chase—an impossible task it seems. But the solution comes on the heels of hard work and hard thinking, and Chief Fellows has a lovely surprise to spring on us at the very end.

"This procedural is true to life, or Mr. Waugh makes us believe it so, and it is absorbingly interesting."

—JULIAN SYMONS in The Times

"Excellent."

From the master of the historical whodunit comes a chilling Gothic tale of warped passion and bizarre murder. Nobody does this better than John Dickson Carr.

WOMEN WRITERS TALK

Edited by Olga Kenyon

At a time when fiction written by women is at its most exciting and women writers are able to explore a broader range of themes, ideas and styles, this collection of interviews provides a revealing look at the thoughts of ten leading artists.

The writers interviewed for this volume are:

Anita Brookner
 Margaret Drabble
 Nadine Gordimer
 P.D. James
 Iris Murdoch
 Alice Thomas Ellis
 Eva Figs
 Michele Roberts
 Emma Tennant
 Fay Weldon

Based on many hours of conversation and perceptive questioning by Olga Kenyon, these interviews allowed the subjects great leeway in the range of topics discussed. Here the writers share with us both their aims and aspirations for their own work as well as their views on writing in the wider context of contemporary artistic and social concerns.

Because the writers were given freedom to reveal themselves fully, anyone interested in the role and position of women in modern fiction will find much to digest, appreciate and delight in. Most importantly, however, this book presents an opportunity to better know and understand the writers themselves, their achievements and their outlook for the future.

OLGA KENYON is the author of a number of books on literature. She currently lives and teaches at University College, London.

BEATRIX

Honoré de Balzac

Balzac's achievement in chronicling human nature and men's modes of life is unequalled in literature. In the 52 novels that comprise The Human Comedy the reader encounters an astonishing array of characters, many of whom reappear in various novels at different stages of their lives. Comparable in many ways to Dickens, Balzac's work formed a more coherent whole and was not constrained by the moral straitjacket of Victorian England.

Beatrix, Balzac's favorite work, essentially recounts the story of George Sand, Franz Liszt, and Marie Agoult. It is an outright feminist treatise, an homage to the strength and suffering of women, and a magnificent, tightly plotted novel told in fast-paced dialogue. It is, in short, a masterpiece.

HONORÉ DE BALZAC (1790-1850) was a close friend and admirer of George Sand, from whom he heard the history that became Beatrix. Carroll & Graf has previously published his César Biroteau and The Lily of the Valley.

A fast and invigorating book, The Embedding infuses science fiction with startling political and intellectual ideas dealing with environmental pollution, mind altering drugs, space travel and Latin-American terrorist movements.

"Ian Watson is the most interesting British sf writer of ideas."

PURSUIT OF FEAR

William Beechcroft

William Beechcroft evokes Washington as well as Len Deighton recreates London. And just as we have a good idea of how the British Secret Service works through Mr. Deighton, so Mr. Beechcroft reveals the inner workings of a secret Washington in a new thriller with shocking parallels to the Iran/Contra case. He takes us inside and shows us the world of realpolitik, confirming all our worst suspicions.

Here a company of sophisticated con men exploit the wealthy right-wingers so successfully milked in real life by Oliver North. The suspense never falters in this rousing tale as young Steve Gammorn finds his missing brother's decapitated body on the shore of an Hawaiian island. Who killed him and his associate, an elderly lawyer—and why? The trail leads to D.C. where Steve begins to assemble bits and pieces of information into an ugly picture of torture and death. THE COMPLEAT WEREWOLF and Other Tales of Fantasy and Science Fiction

Anthony Boucher

This collection by eminent mystery and science fiction critic Anthony Boucher assembles the best of his short fictions. Boucher was an Edgar Award winner and became a major influence in the often merging fields of science fiction, fantasy and horror as founder of The Magazine of Fantasy and Science Fiction.

The title story is a classic mix of lycanthropy, private eyes, fiendish Nazi agents and wisecracking humor. In a similar vein, this anthology also includes witty variations on horror themes: Smulbug, about a deal with a demon; The Ghost of Me, a doppelganger story with a new twist; and The Bite, a rare straight horror tale about desert-dwelling mutants. The other stories are: The Pink Caterpillar, Q U R, Robbie, Expedition, We Print the Truth.

Selected by Stephen Jones and Kim Neuman as one of the "100 Best" horror books.

"The best of Boucher's fantasy tales may be the most famous of his stories, the novella The Compleat Werewolf. Boucher shows two of his virtues as a writer: effective comic reversal of clichés to produce surprise and delight, and an often literary resonance."

—Science Fiction Writers

ANTHONY BOUCHER (1911-1968) is also the author of the mystery classic The Case of the Baker Street Irregulars and editor of Four and Twenty Bloodhounds, both published by Carroll & Graf.

IVANA TRUMP A Very Unauthorized Biography

Norman King

Ivana Trump is the wife and partner of America's most flamboyant billionaire, the ever visible Donald Trump. But whereas much is known about the real estate developer and deal maker, the life of Ivana prior to her emergence on the New York social scene a few years ago is virtually a tabula rasa. Norman King's very unauthorized biography will fill this clean slate with a story that is nothing less than a modern day fairytale.

Ivana did marry her prince but is it a happy ending? It may have been a storybook romance but the real story has not been told until this book.

Utilizing all the skills he developed over the years as an investigative journalist, Norman King explores the many unanswered questions swirling about a couple who deserve a Tom Wolfe novel all to themselves.

- Does Ivana actually run the Atlantic City Casinos and the Plaza Hotel or is she merely a stand-in for Donald?
- Are the Trumps legitimate billionaires or is the empire mostly "paper" wealth?
- What is the real relationship between Ivana and Blaire Trump, brother Robert's wife? Are they friends or competitors?
- Does Ivana actually pay extravagant sums for her designer originals, or, à la Nancy Reagan, does she trade press coverage for bargain prices?
- New York society takes a heavy toll on social couples. Is the Trump union as blissful as it seems?
- Why has so little been previously written about Ivana? Is there an understanding between Donald and the press?

These and many other fascinating revelations are included in this mesmerizing biography of a remarkable woman whose life story will appeal to legions of readers.

NORMAN KING is the author of bestselling biographies of Dan Rather, Oprah Winfrey and Princess Diana.

PATTERN FOR TERROR

Hugh Pentecost

Hugh Pentecost, a founding member of Mystery Writers of America, has long been recognized by both critics and his legions of fans as one of the most consistently entertaining of mystery writers. He has created several successful series detectives, one of the most popular of whom is Uncle George Crowder, hero of Pattern for Terror. A former county prosecutor, he has become a town character, "Uncle George" to everyone and highly respected for good advice as well as his skill in solving curious crimes.

Uncle George is aroused one morning by calls for help from his young nephew Joey, who has found the body of the new teacher from the local private school lying in a water-filled ditch. The teacher is dead of drugs contained in a ruptured pouch he had swallowed to conceal. Crowder gets involved in the investigation but is warned off when Joey is kidnapped. But clever Joey gets a message through. "Friday on Saturday." And only Uncle George knows what that means. The whole community is drawn into the search, from the starkest of faculty members to the coolest of jazz sidemen, but the denouement is as startling as it is logical.

The following comments are from reviews of recent novels by Hugh Pentecost:

"For those who like lots of action, well-set scenes, and dramatic crises."

—Library Journal

"Master plot spinner Pentecost pares away everything inessential from this first class thriller, holding both readers and his main characters hostage to a constant state of tension."
—American Library Association Booklist

HUGH PENTECOST, who won the Mystery Writers of America Grand Master Award, has written several novels featuring Uncle George, including Death by Fire. Another popular hero is Pierre Chambrun, who appeared in 20 novels, including The Cannibal Who Operate and The Guilted Nightmare.

HOW TO WIN AT ROTISSERIE BASEBALL

Peter Golencbock

With an introduction by Bryant Gumbel

Rotisserie Baseball is fast becoming for fans of our National Pastime what Trivial Pursuits was to Yuppies a few years ago.

This newly revised and updated edition of the book, which players in Rotisserie Leagues have sworn by as easily the best guide to the game, was first published in 1987 and sold nearly 50,000 copies. The 1990 guide should do even better. And in succeeding years, all the relevant information—status and statistics—will be accumulated and integrated yearly with an up-to-the-minute edition published each February.

"If you want to win at Rotisserie Baseball, this is the book you really need."

—DAVEY JOHNSON, Manager, The New York Mets

PETER GOLENBROCK is America's most successful writer of sports books. He has published five national bestsellers including The Bronx Zoo and Balls.

QUARTET

Jean Rhys

This powerful psychological novel set in Paris between the wars is Jean Rhys most compelling work.

Stranded and alone after her Polish husband is mistakenly jailed, Marya Zelli is befriended by an English couple who take her home with them. Slowly they overwhelm her; the man by his uncontrollable passions, the woman by using her as a foil against the husband.

Quartet was made into a motion picture starring Alan Bates and Maggie Smith.

"Not only does Miss Rhys deal with the most complex personalities, exploring the most intimate recesses of their psychology, but she does so with the directness and certitude of a fine artist."
—The New York Times

"A terrifying insight and a terrific—an almost lurid!—passion for stating the case of the underdog."
—Ford Madox Ford

JEAN RHY'S other novels include After Leaving Mr. Mackenzie, Voyage in the Dark, Good Morning, Midnight, and Smile Please (an autobiography).

ANTIC HAY

Aldous Huxley

The acclaimed author of Brave New World and a major figure of the literary and intellectual history of this century, here turns his penetrating gaze on one Oxford professor. Reacting against the turgid pedagogy of the times, this learned man is suddenly possessed of the vital instinct for celebration. Replete with satirical portraits of an alternative "bachanalian" society well concealed from the world of convention, Huxley takes his main character through a succession of startling adventures that are the last word in freedom and self-expression.

"A delirium of sense enjoyment. Antic Hay is done with a deft sure touch."
—The New York Times

"A literary delight . . . with satire japing sophistication and a narrative rising and falling in broad comedy and in episodes deliciously strange and tender."
—New Republic

ALDOUS HUXLEY's other important works include Brave New World, Point Counter Point, Chrome Yellow, The Doors of Perception, and a Carroll & Graf edition of Eyesless in Gaza.

DEATH OF MY AUNT

C. H. B. Kitchin

In Death of My Aunt the erudite novelist C. H. B. Kitchin turns for the first time to detective fiction, producing a witty and charming gem of a story—with a leavening dose of the sardonic.

One of the most beautifully developed and quietly amusing characters in detective fiction, Malcolm Warren is a fastidious, even eccentric, young stockbroker, summoned by his very rich and very autocratic aunt. Her sudden and horrible death by poison—at Malcolm's inadvertent hand—plunges our hero into a fevered search for the real killer.

Selected by H. R. F. Keating as one of the "100 Best" crime and mystery novels.
"It sets a new standard in detective fiction."
—Saturday Review

"He had a fearsome knowledge of the crevices of human nature. It is this which, to my mind, puts Death of My Aunt into the topmost category."
—The Times

C. H. B. KITCHIN, a successful stockbroker and mainstream novelist, was rather embarrassed by the success of his mysteries, which include Death of His Uncle, published this season by Carroll & Graf, Crime at Christmas, and The Cornish Fox.

UNSOLVED: Great Mysteries of the 20th Century

Kirk Wilson

In this engaging investigation into the top ten mysteries of our time, we meet or come close to identifying the killers who literally got away with murder.

All ten are real life cases, some still under investigation. Kirk Wilson writes about an amazing array of carefully researched unsolved cases acting as informed judge, jury and prosecutor. To qualify for inclusion in this volume, the author required that each case fulfill three essential criteria: that each was a) a genuine "page one" sensation, b) a first rate tale of murder, and c) still unsolved and therefore mysterious.

As it happens, several of the cases interestingly tie into one another. John F. Kennedy and brother Robert had affairs with Marilyn Monroe and may have had some connection with her death. The Kennedys were tape-recorded in their diversions with Marilyn by arch-enemy Jimmy Hoffa, who in turn subsequently became a posthumous suspect in the JFK assassination conspiracy. Mafia figures also weave their shadowy ways through a number of the cases.

CONTENTS: The Last Time We Saw Camelot: The Assassination of John Kennedy; With Friends Like These: The Disappearance of Jimmy Hoffa; The Two Kings of the Bahamas: The Murder of Sir Harry Oakes; The Man Who Wore a Common Face: The Search for Martin Bormann; Vanishing Justice: The Disappearance of Judge Joseph Force Crater; The Girl Who Crtd Wolf Beautifully: The Death of Marilyn Monroe; The Murder of Being Born Again: The T. Callen Davis Murder Trial; Napoleon's Demise: The Murder of Serge Rubinstein; Sunny in Darkness: The Trial of Claus von Bulow.

KIRK WILSON has written short stories, articles and poems in an assortment of publications over the last two decades. Many of his articles focus on crime and corruption.

ANIMAL IMMORTALITY

A Startling Revelation about Pets and their Afterlife

Bill D. Schul

If animals have souls and immortal life then all creatures on earth have value beyond that accredited by man. Dr. Schul here presents remarkable, fully-documented case studies of deceased pets that have returned to share with their former masters and mistresses and even warn them of imminent danger, as well as studies of phantom animals, creatures revealing an awareness of previous lives and even loyal pets committing suicide.

To read Animal Immortality is an exciting adventure. For those who have deeply loved and lost an animal friend, it gives the hope that death has not closed the door on their relationship. For those more philosophically inclined, the book provokes an intellectual odyssey in the pursuit of consciousness.

BILL D. SCHUL is the bestselling author of The Secret Power of Pyramids and The Psychic Power of Animals.

THE LETTER LEFT TO ME

Joseph McElroy

To many, Joseph McElroy is America's most inventive novelist writing today. He has been favorably compared to Thomas Pynchon and Vladimir Nabokov.

In this startlingly original novel, a middle aged man leaves his son a letter—to be read after his death—describing the failures and aspirations that have marked his life. It ends with poignant advice for his son's future. Ironically, its contents later become known to the son's remaining family and friends and then shared among an ever-widening audience . . . until its meaning is diluted in a nightmarish fashion. This compelling treatment of the power of the absent father and how authority dissolves in culture over time makes this novel a bright new American classic.

"The most important American novelist working now . . . The Letter Left to Me is a welcome new piece of evidence of McElroy's achievement."—New Republic

JOSEPH MCELROY is also the author of Plus, Lookout Cartridge and A Smuggler's Bible, all published by Carroll & Graf. His previous novel was the widely admired Women and Men.

THE WOMAN CHASER

Charles Willeford

According to critics, Charles Willeford "wrote the most eloquently brainy and exacting pulp fiction ever fabricated." (Richard Gehl). In The Woman Chaser, one Richard Hudson, ex-used car salesman and manipulator of attractive women (including a Salvation Army volunteer whom he tempts into prostitution) is one of the most self-conscious (and therefore artful) creations in the history of the genre. He is a 1950s middle class underground man who understands that his life is a walking allegory for American culture: a man driven to control his destiny but primed for self-destruction.

"The Woman Chaser is Willeford's best book. It transforms profound pulp into profound meta cinema with low sex and high energy. Save this book!"

—The Village Voice

CHARLES WILLEFORD wrote seventeen books including the Hoke Mosely police procedurals Miami Blues, New Hope for the Dead, Sideswipe, and The Way We Die Now.

THE MÜLLER-FOKKER EFFECT

John Sladek

John Sladek—along with Philip K. Dick and J. G. Ballard—is one of the liveliest and most creative science fiction writers of the last twenty years. The Müller-Fokker Effect, his second novel, is considered to be more than a decade ahead of his time.

Bob Sharp—a writer and dreamer—has agreed to be a guinea-pig in a military experiment to find out if his personality can be turned into data and stored on computer. But a computing error quickly destroys Sharp's physical body, leaving his mind stranded in an encoded world. Can the process be reversed? Can a human being be recycled? And is this experiment just another twisted scheme for the U.S. military to play with? These are some of the questions that Sladek invites in this pungent combination of science fiction and black humor.

"Wild and explosively funny."

—Library Journal

"A brilliant, bizarre and sometimes savage tale."

—Publishers Weekly

"The novel oscillates brilliantly between the author's insanely funny view of objective reality and the subjective content of the hero's real personality."

—The New York Times Book Review

JOHN SLADEK earned his reputation as a leading writer of science fiction with such brilliant tour de force works as The Reproductive System, Tik-Tok and Roderick and Roderick at Random, the last two published by Carroll & Graf.
