

Startling New Evidence Reveals...
Sirhan Did Not Kill
BOBBY KENNEDY

Ballistics tests show difference between bullets and throw a doubt on case as it now stands

The world was shocked at the mindless murder of Bobby — but it may have been planned

When Robert F. Kennedy died from an assassin's bullet on the floor of a hotel kitchen in Los Angeles, the solution to the crime of the century may have died with him.

For five years, Robert Kennedy had conducted an intensive, secret investigation into the murder of his brother, President John F. Kennedy.

Now has come some startling new evidence that Robert Kennedy probably was gunned down to silence him — before he could expose the real killers of his brother.

This information has come to light in the wake of two private investigations into strange circumstances surrounding the deaths of the Kennedy brothers.

One of those investigations is being conducted by Theodore Charach, a 40-year-old documentarian who has concentrated on Robert Kennedy's assassination. Here are some of his charges:

- Sirhan Sirhan was a hapless dupe in the assassination of Robert Kennedy and although he fired at the senator, the bullets from his gun did not strike him.

- Robert Kennedy was shot from behind by an assassin in the confusion of the moment.

- The Los Angeles Police Department and District Atty. Joseph P. Busch distorted evidence and are continuing to hide facts about the case from the public.

To back these contentions, Charach points out that nine shots were fired during the space of several seconds, yet Sirhan's gun held only eight cartridges.

The gun taken from Sirhan at the scene was a .22 caliber pistol with the serial number H53725. Ballistics tests prove that the bullet found in the neck of Robert Kennedy could not have been fired from that gun.

A second weapon taken at the scene was a .22 caliber pistol belonging to a known right-wing extremist who mysteriously had been hired to protect the senator. His weapon was identified by serial number H18602.

Oddly, the LA Police Department destroyed this gun without ever running ballistics tests on it. This security guard was reported as standing directly at the back of Kennedy during the assassination, according to Charach.

Charach also points out that when Sirhan approached the senator in the narrow kitchen pantry of the Ambassador Hotel, he almost immediately was grabbed by Karl Uecker. Uecker wrestled with Sirhan while he fired his pistol wildly around the room.

Also, according to Charach, the autopsy report shows that Robert Kennedy was shot from behind from a distance of less than three inches. Sirhan was never behind the senator and was never close enough to him to have fired the bullet.

Backing Charach's claims is William W. Harper, a ballistics expert who has handled over 300 cases involving murder by firearms. Here are his conclusions:

"As Sirhan wrestled with Kennedy's aides, he fired wildly and the bullets struck and wounded five persons. However, it is highly unlikely any bullets fired by Sirhan's gun struck the senator. Robert Kennedy was killed by a bullet, fired from behind, by a second gunman."

So who killed Robert Kennedy, and why?

The answer to this question may come from a second investigation being conducted by a 38-year-old author and historian named Harold Eden:

It is his contention that the same individuals conspired to assassinate John F. Kennedy in Dallas and

"Bobby Kennedy had actually devoted his life to finding the persons responsible for the death of his brother," says Eden. "He used the facilities of his office when he was attorney general to begin the investigation. He later spent a small fortune trying to find answers. I think he found them and that's why he's dead."

"A murder usually is an easy crime to investigate," says Eden. "Every day, police across the country solve dozens of them—over 96 percent. Yet, here we have the three most important murders of the century still unsolved."

That means something is wrong.

Martin Luther King in Memphis. He claims Robert Kennedy was assassinated because he was nearing the solution to the Dallas and Memphis murders.

Martin Luther King's death is apparently linked to Kennedys'

"All three murders are similar," he claims. "In each case there was a dupe, a fall guy—Oswald, Ray and Sirhan. And in each case, the autopsies and ballistics tests were horribly botched. And in each case, the authorities either hid or distorted evidence in order to get convictions."

Eden refuses to discuss details of the findings of his investigation, saying it will all be available someday in book form.

"But it involves a conspiracy that represents an extreme and dangerous element in our society," he insists.

Meanwhile, both Charach and Eden intend to keep probing for still more answers.

Charach has even filed a suit against California officials ranging from LA Police Chief Edward M. Davis to State Attorney General Evelle J. Younger, seeking information he claims they have hidden in the Robert Kennedy case.

"They have deliberately, intentionally and knowingly suppressed facts and evidence," he claims, "and I intend to see that the public has access to it."

Until such facts are forthcoming, clouds of doubt will continue to hang over the three most sensational murders of the century.
