Dear Jean-Michel,

It is disappointing to have to write you again and not to have the return of my materials from you when I again need them and do not have them.

I regret also that the impression I former of you seems to have been unjustified.

The end of this coming week I have college appearances to make. They are the first that have been possible for me since June, when there was another reversal in my health. For these I need what I loaned you months ago. I have written you asking for their return when you did not keep your word about returning them. You have not even acknowledged receiving my requests.

Of course there now is not sufficient time for you to make belated return of what I loaned you before I leave.

In itself this is hurtful to me, as it is disappointing to find that when I went out of my way to be helpful to you and French TV I find you can't be trusted.

If I have not heard from you within a reasonable time after my return I will have no choice but to seek other means of recovering my property.

Too bad the kind of conduct I never expected of you leaves me no other choice.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
