Dear Mr. Weisberg,

I received your letter today. Thank you very much for your promptness in replying, in fact, considering Garrison, for replying at all. I thank you even more for your advice and enlightenment concerning Katz, Executive Action, and Garrison. I now realize that in my quest for new and controversial information about the assassination, I failed to examine this information objectively and realistically.

However, this was not the case in writing my term paper. I think I must have led you to believe that the only sources of information for my paper were Bob Katz and Executive Action. This is my fault, of course. Enclosed is a copy of the bibliography of my paper, along with a list of sources I have consulted since writing that paper.

I realize how very busy you must be, so please don't feel like you have to write back. It just seemed from the tone of your letter that you thought I had based all my research on fiction and hearsay. I wanted to clear that up and thank you for your help.

N. Blake Couch
