Cuban Exile Leader Out in Rift With U.S.

By TAD SZULC Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 9 Administration sources said tonight that Dr. José Miró Cardona had resigned as head of the Cuban Revolutionary Council in Miami because the United States refused to let him direct an early invasion of Cuba.

These sources indicated that Dr. Miró Cardona had threatened to resign unless the United States either supplied him with $50,000,000 to build an invasion army or assured him of full participation in plans for "an early United States invasion of Cuba."

In view of the Administration's rejection of what were described as demands presented

Continued on Page 8 Column 4

NYTIMES 4110/63p.

CUBAN-EXILE HEAD QUITS IN DISPUTE

Continued From Page 1, Col. 5

by him in a highly emotional state, Dr. Miró Cardona announced his resignation in Miami today. The council, however, may seek to dissuade him from his attitude.

Dr. Miró Cardona visited Washington last weekend to confer with top United States officials, including Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and State Department aides.

Officials here had sought to prevail upon Dr. Miró Cardona not to place the situation on a "take it or leave it" basis that would be impossible to accept, but the exile leader apparently persisted in his attitude.

Today Robert A. Hurwitch, deputy head of the Adminis-tration's Cuba Coordinating Coordinating Committee, flew to Miami to chairman of the Cuban Revolu-threat.

It was assumed that Dr. Miro Cardona, long dissatisfied with invasion was carried out in the the Kennedy Administration's council's name, although Dr. careful policy on Cuba, had Miró Cardona and his fellowcome to his decision to resign- council members were held in-unless an invasion was ordered communicado in Florida at the immediately—in the wake of time, and his son was among last week's joint British-Amer- the prisoners taken by the Casican actions designed to prevent tro forces when the attack col-anti-Castro rebels from raids against the island and Soviet shipping in Cuban ports. According to Miami reports, tained its political and financial these actions, which included support for the council, treating the capture of several raider it as the representative body of expeditions, have destroyed the the anti-Castro community in operational capacity of the the United States. rebel groups

His Position Difficult

The explosion of bitterness Special to The New York Times against the United States in MIAMI, April 9-The Cuban Castro, has, in turn, placed Dr. be reached immediately. Miró Cardona in an almost un-

The New York Times

QUITS REBEL POST: Dr. José Miró Cardona, who resigned as president of Cuban Revolutionary Council.

try to persuade Dr. Miro Car- tionary Council on the eve of dona again to withdraw his the frustrated Bay of Pigs rebel invasion two years ago.

The United States-supported

No Immediate Decision

the Florida refugee community, Revolutionary Council met to-coupled with charges that the night to consider the resigna-Kennedy Administration is en- tion of Dr. Miró Cardona as its gaging in "coexistence" with president, but there was little the regime of Premier Fidel indication that a decision would Sources close to the council tenable position toward his said that the statement out of fellow-Cubans. Washington that Dr. Miró Car-

Dr. Miro Cardona, who served dona was demanding $50,000. in 1959 as Premier in the Cas-1000 to equip a Cuban force to tro Government and later as be used against Premier Castro Ambassador to Spain, became had angered the council.