

Terrorist Incidents Stir Miami Cubans

By [unclear]

MIAMI, Fla.—A rash of bombings, kidnappings and the emergence of a new, secret anti-Castro terrorist organization here is heightening fear and political dissent to the normally quiet Cuban exile community in Miami.

The trouble came in a head-on conversation with a man taken with the Havana-bound packages of food, clothing and medicine.

Later, an organization calling itself "Cuba Libre" (Free Cuba) claimed credit for the bombings as well as for three bombings in Cuba itself and an explosion in Havana.

In a statement, the Communist Party of Cuba and the Cuban Revolutionary Council were mentioned.

Exiles in Miami, who are on the ground, said it was run by a group of men.

Some of the men were seen in the streets of Miami. They were seen to be carrying packages to Cuba.

The men were seen to be carrying packages to Cuba. They were seen to be carrying packages to Cuba.

Some of the men were seen in the streets of Miami. They were seen to be carrying packages to Cuba.

When a package of white powder was dropped on the dance floor of a Cuban party at a local hotel, ten persons were taken to a hospital.

The same powder, which floats like gas and causes irritation to the face, was thrown at another crowd Dec. 2 at a party.

A third powder thrower sent persons to a hospital Dec. 3.

Harold Swill, Miami intelligence investigator, believes the terrorists feel exiles are forgetting those still in Cuba. "They think exiles should not have fun or enjoy themselves while their people are in prison in Cuba," Swill says.