

dallas police

During the testimony of Asst. Chief Batchelor, Exhibit 5002 was introduced. It is labeled "Personnel Assignments" and purports to be the personnel assignments for the Dallas police for November 1963. It is 19 H 117-48. It ~~is~~ does not reveal the radio symbols of the various people; it reveals no detective named "Ward" (see Larry Schmidt exhibits); in fact, it has no separate listing for detectives. It also does not list the various divisions, such as Narcotics, for one, which is otherwise referred to as a separate unit. Among the most interesting things is the appearance of Eunice Sorrells as secretary of the chief's office with a grade of 8, two grades higher than any other civilian listed. It is probably just coincidence, but this is a not very common name and also is that of the chief of the Dallas office of the Secret Service.

There are several Tippits; J. D. Tippit's assignment was to the second platoon of the southwest area substation (p.126).

Capt. Doughty, whom I thought I had identified in the logs, is Capt. George M. Doughty, of the Identification Bureau.

Lt. John C. Day is the head of the "Crime Scene Search Section" of this Bureau (p.135)

dallas police

During the testimony of Asst. Chief Batchelor, Exhibit 5002 was introduced. It is labeled "Personnel Assignments" and purports to be the personnel assignments for the Dallas police for November 1963. It is 19 H 117-48. It ~~is~~ does not reveal the radio symbols of the various people; it reveals no detective named "Ward" (see Larry Schmidt exhibits); in fact, it has no separate listing for detectives. It also does not list the various divisions, such as Narcotics, for one, which is otherwise referred to as a separate unit. Among the most interesting things is the appearance of Eunice Sorrells as secretary of the chief's office with a grade of 8, two grades higher than any other civilian listed. It is probably just coincidence, but this is a not very common name and also is that of the chief of the Dallas office of the Secret Service.

There are several Tippits; J. D. Tippit's assignment was to the second platoon of the southwest area substation (p.126).

Capt. Doughty, whom I thought I had identified in the logs, is Capt. George M. Doughty, of the Identification Bureau.

Et. John C. Day is the head of the "Crime Scene Search Section" of this Bureau (p.135)