From R. H. Patterson, Brynwood, Minn., to Jeanne Jansen

"Here is the latest with from the U.S.A.: In Comodis' research the editor of The New York Times got out that David (Alvin Karpis) was not only a doctor but also a medical examiner charged by the Russians with involvement in the Penkovsky affair (see also

U.S. "Imbroglio in Moscow was the bad doctor, who even used his mother as part

Nov. 1, 1959 to the new provision indicating (as much as I can tell) that Harry Gold was a CIA agent and had been sent to the Soviet Union for spying purposes. But Harry was of his submissions at the

About David's role in the Penkovsky affair, David Wise and Thomas

Wise wrote in "Who Invades Government" (p. 20-21):

"(In 1955) the Russians quoted five Americans from the embassy in the Soviet Union as spy cases... At his trial in Nov. 1955, he (Penkovsky) claimed that information about Soviet rockets and other secrets to America would have him investigated as a member because the traitor in the embassy was a Moscow apartment house at 17, 5-6 Pravost Street. He would find a circle of charlors on Pravost No. 35 near a bus stop on Kuznetsky Prospekt. This bus stop made him telephone of other Captain Alvin H. Patterson, the series of which he called the American Embassy (who were also the embassy doctors) or Karen Johnson, the internal security officer. Patterson would go to the large post office, the Russians claimed. If he found the charlors circling him there nothing ready to be picked up at the Pravost Street drop..."

The situation is perfectly clear. David escaped from the U.S. to the Soviet Union as a spy agent which included both Old Penkovsky & Young Penkovsky, the internal security officer. Patterson would go to the large post office, the Russians claimed. If he found the charlors circling him there

nothing ready to be picked up at the Pravost Street drop..."

From a paper in Paris (undated), because permission to use his name could not be obtained in time:

Mr. Johnson - for the past several months an extreme right-wing newspaperman has been publishing letters by letter the name of the CIA top official, only when these names matched the letters the letter was published. One from Johnson, who was brought to New Orleans by Garrison in Feb. 1957 and questioned before the Grand Jury. What do you know about him? He may be involved in killing whatever about the case. It should be recalled, though, that Garrison failed to back up at the Olay Shaw trial two years later, that is, his source the conspirator speaks up and the like, one very ridiculous argument, if using newspaper gives rise to caution. Saturating etc., could be a red herring -

What is this? A series of quotes from Frank Lovett? No, sir, you have got it by Joseph Keat, published in the International Herald Tribune of Oct. 18, 1958. John Nixon came to power TRUTH LEADER (Dec. 1, 1958) ran this "Saul's Plan of Reincarnation." Oh, God. Let TRUTH LEADER stay in business. He did.
