A House subcommittee re- at the Bay of Pigs. ported yesterday that U. S. spies were collecting informahave time to read it. The backlog, it said, may have contributed to recent intelligence failures such as capture of the USS Pueblo.

The Defense Appropriations Vietnam. Subcommittee said unprocessed reports on Southeast erage Asia alone recently filled 517 from the time of receipt for a linear feet of file drawer space at the headquarters of lysts," the subcommittee re-Defense Intelligence ported. Agency (DIA), created in 1961

He said proper intelligence should have provided fore-warning that an attack was likely, making possible a response by South Korean air force planes which he said were only 15 or 20 minutes away.

"It has been evident from witnesses that it did not dawn on our top leaders that the Tet offensive was going to happen when it did," Whitten said, referring to the surprise Vietcong attack on Saigon and other South Vietnamese cities.

Lt. Gen. Joseph F. Carroll, DIA director, conceded the need for improvement, but insisted no "hot" information had been lost.

Carroll testified that the unprocessed data on Southeast Asia had since been cut to two feet. This could not be considered a backlog, he said, since the daily inflow amounts to three feet. .
