By Tom Curtis Special to The Washington Post

HOUSTON, Jan. 10-City officials are trying to decide what to do with more than 1,-)00 noncriminal files that they ay local police assembled durng the past decade on politially active citizens.

The police chief says ultinately he will give them to he mayor. A city councilman vants a blue-ribbon committee named to investigate them ind decide how to dispose of hem. And the Houston chaper of the American Civil' liberties Union today filed suit seeking to prevent their iestruction and to put them nto the hands of a federal cline such aid. judge.

Police Capt. B. G. Bonds, who was recently put in charge of the files, says nothing will happen to them anytime soon. Because of a complicated cross-reference sys-tem, it will require months to weed out noncriminal information.

Mayor Fred Hofheinz, a liberal Democrat, confirmed at a news conference this week that the files exist and that the name of Rep. Barbara Jordan (D-Tex.) was in them. She is from Houston. He said he Carrol Lynn, to purge political information from the files, which were maintained by the department's Criminal Intelligence Division.

Hofheinz said he learned of ter taking office a year ago pings, he said. but delayed action until he partment.

types and subversives" during his almost 10 years in office but said he recalled none on Rep. Jordan.

Short said the department didn't investigate "citizens days of the ministration." He added, however, that the first thing in information in the control of the control it did "routinely watch any-thing that looked like it might be a significant danger to the city's welfare."

As police chief, Short consistently refused to accept federal funds for his department, saying he feared it would lead to federal control. Houston was then the largest city to de-

Short also was a strong public supporter of George Wallace's presidential campaigns. His department was quently charged with brutality by black citizens. Whether Hofheinz would fire Short was a major issue in Hofheinz's unsuccessful first campaign for mayor in 1971 as well as in his successful one in 1973. Hof-heinz won in 1973 with overwhelming black support.

George Strong, a top Hof-heinz aide, said information on liberals, blacks and civil libertarians makes up the bulk of the non-criminal files, alhad ordered his police chief, though radicals, moderates and conservatives also appear in them. He said the files consist of an index-card system that refers to lengthy reports of rallies, meetings and surveillances. About half of the the files' existence shortly af- files consist of newspaper clip-

Chief Lynn said the files rewas sur he had "administra-tive control" of the police de-clothes officers were assigned to cover a women's liberation Herman Short, Chief Lynn's meeting. He said equally immediate predecessor, said heavy surveillance was main in Texas unless performed by police kept files on "radical tained on a speaker before a a federal agent under court meeting of the Harris County order. Democrats, the liberal wing of the local party. Lynn also said firmed that files were also he believed a number of files maintained on U.S. Rep. Bob were destroyed in the waning Casey, a conservative Houston days of the previous city ad- Democrat.

information was obtained by ent injunction against main-wiretapping, which is illegal taining noncriminal files.

City officials have con-

The ACLU class-action suit Hofheinz said the files con-tain information on "hun to preserve the files and dedreds" of his friends and liver them under seal to a fed-workers in his 1973 campaign. eral court for inspection. Ulti-He said some of the files con-sons' sex lives and some of the damage claims and a perman-