I called [redacted] Legat at London, and advised him that [redacted] we understand, will complete his work in Lisbon sometime tomorrow. He was to get in touch with the Bureau before he left Lisbon to return to Paris.

[redacted] stated that he had asked the Bureau to furnish a restraining kit to him and that if a military plane was used that a medical doctor be requested to accompany the plane.

Martindale is in London and [redacted] will instruct him to coordinate any memorandum reflecting investigation being conducted. He is to also tell Martindale that [redacted] will check prior to the time he leaves Lisbon to determine whether the investigation which he has conducted is satisfactory. If Martindale feels that it does complete the work, [redacted] will return to Paris and immediately submit information covering the nature and extent of his investigation for transmittal to the Bureau. He will, however, check with Martindale to determine the information is adequate and in proper form.

[redacted] was asked whether major case prints have been taken in this matter (palm prints and prints covering the full fingers). He said that under British law no prints can be taken of an individual until after he is convicted. The results of the fingerprints of subject Ray by British authorities were furnished to [redacted] "under the table."

ACTION TAKEN:

Mr. DeLoach has arranged for the furnishing of the restraining kit and medical doctor in the event such is needed.
