This law is misname 'freedom of informat

Call it heresy, if you will, and is a vehicle of disinfor- or abandoned. mation.

It was founded on the laudable notion that those doing the public's business ought to be compelled to tell the people more about how they go about doing that business. But it was also based on the naive notion that public officials will voluntarify reveal information that makes them look like idiots, crooks, criminals or the sort.

So what we have is an act full of escape hatches and loopholes that permits all manner of nuts to see "their files," which are of no public interest, but requires governmental agencies to reveal only a selective part of the truth about issues of great importance.

The result is that:

American taxpayers are spending many millions of dollars yearly to finance a game of paper shuffling.

Tons of documents are being released which raise myriad doubts and questions, but which never tell us any great truths.

The public - and even part of the press - is being lulled into a false assumption that because of the Freedom of Information Act, government is leveling with the people more than ever in our history.
