Dear Harold;

Here are the stats of the Maestri opus.

Theme of book: Democratic capitalism has run its course of usefulness. The proletariat has failed and grows increasingly weak as a political factor. Consequently, the "providential solution" which can unite the "eternal of the old world with the indispensable of the new" is the "national socialist movement."

Some quotes:

"National Socialism is the effort capable of harmonizing the eternal of the old and the indispensable of the new, must have appeared to many as a providential solution."

And:

"National Socialism is the political ideology that answers the new reality, offers itself as a capable historical movement which must be taken into account in the future."

Etc.

That Chilean stuff ought to be in next week, I guess.

Take care of yourself and stay away from the public schools or polio will get you.

Regards,
