Dear Roger,

When I'll awakened me last night to take your call there is something I forgot to tell you. I want you to know but for the time being not to say anything about it because I do not want to have to respond to anything at all about it now.

Gallen is going to publish ~~my~~ new book. I know nothing more about that and won't until I get the contract. He'd been trying to reach me for much of a week but when he called ~~was when~~ we were not home.

Means I have to get back on what remains to be done on it.

My understanding of what you decided is that what you want is the correspondence and any notes. I expect to see McKnight over the weekend and if he confirms what I think I remember that he told me, she had that correspondence in a separate file, ~~if so~~ I'll tell Helen to copy that and then to go over the two other files for any notes that, if she sees any, she should copy. I won't mail this until after I speak to McKnight. I think that if all goes well Helen will mail you what she copied Tuesday evening. I hope she can get it done by then because ~~she~~ ^{next} is the last week she'll be working for me. She graduates the end of next week.

I do believe strongly after reading that enormity of sickness that Lifton took all that time to write that the briefest possible response, ridiculing him as much as possible, is what is called for. For him to take all that time for so minuscule an audience is I think an indication of his present situation as he sees it and of the fact that he really has nothing to do. He is fighting for what he thinks his reputation should be. And was forced to see really isn't.

Best,
