And
(Haynes Johns, Pulitzer-Prize winning Washington Star" reporter who made his own impressive New Orleans investigation, ~~and~~ printed with a banner ~~on~~ front-page headline February 27, 1967, said these things about Ferrie:

"...he was a militant ~~anti-Castroite~~ anti-Castroite who actively participated in Bay of Pigs activity in New Orleans, and he was clearly an intelligent but disturbed person...Ferrie never tried to hide his activity on behalf of anti-Castro Cubans...He was also regarded as something of a quick-buck artist, anxious for money, but with little visible means of support." He found Ferrie "a singularly repelling figure" who, "instead of buying an adequate wig, effected a different, more striking devise. He glued down his red toupee...with glucose cement."

Ferrie had a "preoccupation with Socrates"- his constant reaction to every problem was to walk up and down the room beating his forehead and saying, 'Now what would Socrates have done"', according to Mrs. Martin (wife of Jack S.)

Lil, please return.
