Survive Prevai

G. Gordon Liddy to lecture at Weinberg on Jan. 8

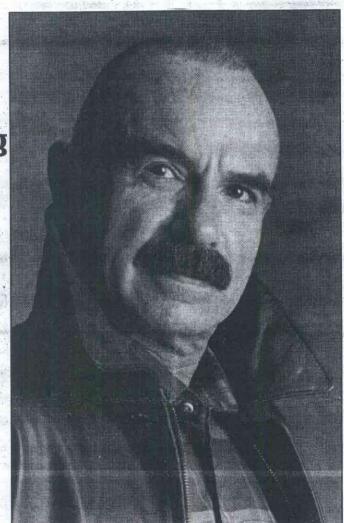

As host of one of the hottest radio talk shows in national syndication, G. Gordon Liddy has established himself as "one of the most intel-ligent and engaging voices in the country." His triumphant return to the nation's capital on WJFK radio also illustrates the significance of his central message: the importance of striving to prevail where others just survive, whatever your field of endeavor.

It is that message that Liddy will bring to the Weinberg Center for the Arts on Saturday, Jan. 8, beginning at 8 p.m. His lecture will be followed by a question and answer period with the audience, followed by a catered reception for a limited number of patrons, with an opportunity to meet and talk with Liddy personally.

Somewhat of a mythical figure, Liddy was educated privately by Benedictines and Jesuits. He earned a B.S. degree from Fordham University and an Ll.D. from the Fordham Law School, graduating as a member of The Law Review. After two years service as an Army artillery officer during the Korean War, Liddy entered the FBI as a special agent, rapidly earned multiple commendations from the late J. Edgar Hoover, and, at age 29, became the youngest bureau supervisor at FBI national headquarters in Washington, D.C., where he served during the Kennedy adminstration.

Liddy resigned from the FBI in

In the Nixon admistration, Liddy first served as a special assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury; was then appointed Enforcement Legislative Counsel, authored the Explosives Control Act and, in 1971, was sent to the White House as staff assistant to the President of the United States.

At the White House, Liddy had oversight responsibility for Treasury policy of firearms and explosives and authored the memorandum that led to the creation of the Drug Enforcement Administration. Subsequently he was assigned additional duties as a member of the top secret White House special investigations group. Liddy resigned his White House post to accept the positions of General Counsel of the 1972 Republican presidential campaign and the campaign finance committee, with additional duties as campaign political intelligence director.

The rest is history.

For his role in Watergate, and for refusing steadfastly to implicate others, "Liddy was sentenced to more than 20 years in prison. He served nearly five years, many in maximum security, including 106 days of solitary confinement, before his release by President Carter "in the interests of justice."

Today, in addition to his radio program, Liddy is the author of three bestsellers, a contributing editor to Forbes, F.Y.I. Magazine, an actor in motion pictures and television and an owner of the G. Gordon Liddy Institute in Miami, which does security consulting and training. He is a member of the Honor Legion of the Police Department of the City of New York and, according to The Wall Street Journal, "one of the most sought-after speakers in the nation."
