Dear Mr. Wersberg:

I am in receipt of your letter of Feb. 12, 1967, and it was nice to hear from you. The thing that impresses me most about Kennedy Assassination is the immense amount of new material that can be turned up both photographic and otherwise. It irritates me mightily to see that Manchester after two years of research on his book, and turns up with nothing new. He is mainly concerned with making something on it, and not with preserving history.

I'll look forward to hearing from you again.

Sincerely yours,
Joseph J. Tricelli

Dear Mr. Fucilli,

Your clippings are very helpful. They are now and they will be in the future. I am writing now to tell you this and to thank you because, although already overcommitted, as time goes on I'll have even less time for letters.

As you realize, I must spend some time travelling. When I do I do not have access to the New York papers. When I am home I frequently do not simply because they are not available in the country.

Even if the clippings you are sending duplicate, they still serve a useful purpose, as I this morning discovered. I can cut them up and save appreciable typing.

There are indications all my files will wind up in an archive in a university. Therefore, these clippings may serve an additional historical purpose in the future, saving scholars the great time of combing newspaper files on this subject.

The clippings on the Manchester book are particularly valuable. I am writing on it, probably a book. His work is conspicuously inaccurate as it relates ~~the~~ to the assassination, in itself a great tragedy, and undependable where he blunders around in slush. This is so awfully much the case most people will not be willing to believe it because of his auspicious and connections.

So, because I may not in the immediate future be able to take the time to ineach case write and thank you, I do not want you to misconstrue my silence. You are very helpful, and I do, very much, appreciate it.

Sincerely yours,

Harold Weisberg
