Dear Peter,

Thanks for the explanation and your good wishes.

I have been fortunate in being able to be as productive as I have been.
and in lasting long enough to do what I've done.

I'm grateful, too.

I'm ever so much weaker, have difficulty not falling yet I am still able to work.

And will as long as I can.

I hope all of you have a good holiday season and a good year.

Please remember me to Raphaela, too.

You were both thoughtful and helpful and I appreciate it.

Best wishes,

Dear Harold:

Richard has passed on to me your inquiry as to which pages were dropped from Never Again! when the revised page proofs were sent to the printer. Unfortunately, I can't answer that question. I do recall problems with pagination in the first pass, and I think they arose in "Pictures Worth More Than Ten Thousand Words," which may also have been the chapter that had not been typeset separately. Still, I don't think that would account for the discrepancy between the pages in the text and the pages indicated in the index, as that chapter comes rather late in the book and discrepancies, I believe, appear early on. Nor do I any longer have copies of the page proofs or the setting copy to make any comparisons. So I am of no help, I'm sorry to say.

You, I gather, continue productively, despite the persistence of health problems. I hope that the upcoming holiday season spares you and Lil harsh weather and that it brings you both joy.

Best regards,
