Dear Dick,

Thanks for your opinion re the page from the Davis book. I didn't think it was libel but is sure is defamatory. I've persisted with him and McGraw-Hill and they've agreed to eliminate some. I'm still after them to remove my name entirely. They have a problem with that because the phony book hangs on his fabrications. In any event, I've made a record for archival purposes. It is only NAL that has not responded. I think McGraw-Hill has put a little pressure on Davis. What a wretch!

Commentary on publishers: they are unconcerned about complete fabrications if they smell a buck.

You say that Jill continues to work on her new book. From this I take it one at least has appeared. I hope it was successful. Aditto for the new one.

Too bad the boys didn't connect with a firm that provided them with stimulating and gratifying work as lawyers. I suppose that most do not make money from that kind of law cases.

In any event, as they'll learn, they are better off with law degrees, whether or not they ever practise law.

My wife picked something up for children that indicates that Peter Workman is doing interesting thing. I hope also prospering from them.

I hope you are all well and happy,

Dear Harold:

Thank you for your letter of July 25, 1989.

The facts you describe and the page enclosed (page 414) are in my opinion not libelous. They may be incorrect statements. It is a shame that neither of the publishers has been responsive to you.

Jill continues to work on her new book.

Jon is now studying real estate in graduate school at New York University. He passed the California Bar and practiced law in Los Angeles for a year and a half, but did not enjoy it.

David has passed the New York Bar and is working at a New York law firm, but does not enjoy the practice of law either.

Keep up the good fight and stay well.

Best,

Richard Gallen
