Dear Lou,

271.62

Perhaps, some day, you will have funds and can repay the costs of my trip. For that happy eventuality, which I know may never come to pass, here they are: $55.62 total. I have copies of what bills I could get. Here is a dupe of the plane bill. The next largest item was $54.00 for car rental. All in all, a rather inexpensive trip.

I hope you do not get busy and forget to send the things I await. One thing I forgot to ask for is either a copy of the Bolden interview or a list of the names mentioned that may fit in some of the areas in which I am working.

Although I had little doubt that the young woman knew Godfrey and knew him well, I now have absolutely none. I have discovered her use of a word that does not exist that he invented. I have it in his writing and in hers to me! It is a nonexistent word that is part of her vocabulary.

Jim wanted me to go see him at Jackson. There was no time. Each of the women offered to accompany me, each saying he would not talk freely to me (or anyone else) alone. I am convinced Jim is right and will do it next time I am down. Jim will want me when he gets to several interrogations we discussed. I am going to mention another to him with this mailing.

If you can spare me a copy of the decision of this week, some of the reporters on the other side have expressed misgivings over the interpretation of it I have given them. One would like to attend any proceeding on it and has asked me to keep him posted.

Best regards,
