hides ' bovernment for

By George Hardrier Jr. Washington Post Staff Writer and scolded Iran-contra prosecutors for trying to muzzle him. his secret career at the agency dur-George was entitled to delve into A federal judge said yesterday that former CIA spy master Clair E. ng his forthcoming criminal trial that accords defendant something equivalent to war-hero status would of the defendant's career," Judge Royce Lamberth said in a permitted to give some background about themselves," U.S. District judge warned, "then an admission insists on sanitizing all of the details 39-page ruling. "If the government "Criminal defendants are always a worldwide force of some 2,500 Once the high-ranking deputy director for operations at CIA, with be appropriate."

> the Iran-contra affair. sional and grand jury inquiries into of lying and obstructing congrespeople at his command, George faces trial this month on nine counts go to the jury." during which [George] and with the prosecution's attempts classified information in his defense lied and permit no other evidence to to "freeze-frame" on the moments tempts to use extensive amounts of Lamberth dealt with George's at-In yesterday's pretrial order, allegedly of secret documents to demonstrate the "context" of his position. But he added that he "must now similarly showing any context at all." to force production of vast numbers chastise the government for atthe past criticized George for trying tempting to deny defendant from The judge noted that he has in

George, the ruling made clear, he had to deal. ens of sensitive covert-action prohis worldwide directorate, the doz-"flaps" or controversies with which his tenure and the wide variety of grams that were carried out during the CIA, the internal workings of ture and day-to-day functioning of pation defense," explain the strucwas and, as part of this wants to show what a busy man he the Reagan administration's covert resupply network for the Niyers plan to argue that he had diversion of profits from those deals to the contra cause. George's lawcaraguan contras, secret U.S. armsaccount for this one. many other problems to be held to for-hostages deals with Iran and the The Iran-contra affair involved ğ prosecution's view of the case was legitimate approach and Lamberth ruled that this was a preoccu-

George "must be permitted to provide the jury with some infor-mation about his life and career," the substance of his career and his success must come through." specific places and operations, but the government may substitute for Lamberth said. "Unquestionably, until July 20 at the earliest. cluded. There will be no testimony will begin when these are conuled to start Monday. Jury selection Final pretrial hearings are sched much too narrow. The judge said, would suffocate virtually any defense that Mr. George sought to make." The government's vision of the case

Irying to Gag 1

also ruled against George time and judge said substitute phrases and generalities would suffice for again in his efforts to make public the secret "details" of his work. The George to make his points. But having said that, Lamberth suffice for