Mr. John M. Mitchell
Attorney General of the United States
Department of Justice
Washington, D.C.

Dear Mr. Mitchell,

Before your predicessors left office, a had been led to believe by his sporopriate sesistant that I could expect meaningful response to inquiries I had addressed to his about Marren-Commission material impreparly withheld by order of the department you now head. It has not heppened. I write you haping that with a new administration, one without political responsibility for the errors of the past, I might expect something better.

I asked for certain, specific withheld material. I was teld a review was then under way, would some be completed, and I would hear further. I have not. In gairness to you and your assistants, I want you to know that in one case I know what is in what is withheld and an certain it was suppressed without possibility of cause, save to prevent embarressment to the government.

Intending to be neither provocative nor offensive, may I sak you to consider if you, too, will not, in effect, be captive of those who have controlled the past and its error, who have a very strong interest in what you know or get to know, what you believe? From whom else can or will you get information? The operating personnel of your department remains unchanged. hose who provided the information used as the tasis for the wrong decisions that remain will, perforce, be the same experts on when you will have to draw. Those who accepted the word of others on faith, no foult believing they safely sould, are still persuaded by the error given them as fact.

May I further suggest that so one of his last sets, the man who preceded you has so redically changed the situation, without it being thought out and understood, you need not be deeply sensermed over whether seknowledgement of error is an extensive indictment of the party that provided five of the seven numbers of the Commission. It is now possible to address one espect of the situation, without regard to the membership of the Commission, and to reach a positive determination of basic feet. I can help you and, if you ac desire, an envious to. I would like to believe that the first administration not the beneficiary of the assessmention woulf slee to seek to justify the re-establishment of faith in their government lost, I think preparly, to so many citizens entirely unsatisfied by what their government has told them.

Besed on the record of the pest, I presume you will be assured that fact is not on the side of which I am pert, that we are mute, self-seekers or just sincere but wrong. However, I am convinced I know what your saviners do not, that I have invested time and study equalled by no other, in or out of the government, and have thereby learned what others do not know. Therefore, if this is what you are told, I ask you to pick several of what you regard as the key questions of fact and let me confront them on those in your presence. In a few minutes on any vital one, I am cortain you will recognize at least a reasonable doubt, a lack of cortainty that connet be telerated when the subject is the marker of a President and the uncertainty most not exist. I do believe on thorough inquiry, which you are not likely to get from your subordinates, you will conclude I have given you a very considerable understatement.

It seems to me that if you do this, you will, eside from benefitting the national honor, do much to build fuith and confidence in the new administration of which you are so important a part.

You may have received a briefing from the numerous U.S. Atterneys in eqtendence at the recent New Orleans trial. Probably your department now has the transcripts of this trial. If yoursers to be source of what I can point out to you in these transcripts, I believe you will have initiated estions on your own, prior to receipt of this letter.

Agein, because I do not want to be in the position of seeming to alip up on your blind side, I want you to know that I have no doubt at all that empthing more than the most perfunctory inquiry is going to confront you with the question of perfury. I have so doubt at all it was committed.

By purpose in writing is to ask of my government what it has improperly denied me. It is also to offer you whatever help you will accept in what mey very well become a major problem for you and your administration if you do not seek and use outside help. You begin without responsibility in this ewful thing that has happened. The longer you stay in office, the less this will be true, for an the assumption of office you also assumed certain responsibilities, so did the administration of which you are part.

By offer is sincere, as you ern readily learn for yourself. And believe me, there are few entheatic experts on this subject.

Respectfully yours,

Marold heisberg
