

Dear Gerry,

5/11/95

Thanks for your 5/8 with the Mailr thing I had misplaced. There is another one I cannot find.

I'm coming along with Mailer's Tales. The part on his defamation of Marina is I think quite powerful.

Some of what Dennis sent was quite helpful, too. I am glad to know they used that other than in the Wx Post.

Someone you do not know is here and I'm answering letters when he is not talking to me.

I think I have about 50-60,000 words on paper and I'm about finished with the first part of his book, I will be looking for help for the second part. I am hoping to be able to get a graduating hood student who has some familiarity with the subject to make a Case Open ^{print out} and isolate the pages not published that use Poser as a prosecution brief as a defense lawyer would have. When you get to reading it if you cannot print those pages out would you please make a list of them so I can use them vs Mailer for the same purpose? I have a delicious quote from him that warrants using all of that ^{now} and with luck and the number of people Mailer offends perhaps some interest might develop.

At Penn where he spent four days with history majors he said ~~fiction~~ ^{novels} and history are the same, both are fiction; that history is lies; and that he does not use the assassination evidence because it is "impenetrable." So, I show how "impenetrable."

The RH ad and no mention of Posner says all that has to be said about publishers, does it not? Although I think by now they may be glad that he is in their past. Aside from a linger case in court, on appeal.

I do not know if the ^{se}clippings interest you but I send them in the event they might.

Best,

Harold

Dear Harold,

5/8/95

Enclosed is a copy of the big full-page ad for Mailer's book in this past Sunday's (May 7th) New York Times Book Review section. I find it a bit curious that the ad claims no one else has asked the question, who is Oswald? Not even their star of two years ago, Gerald Posner? Also enclosed is an article I believe you sent me which includes some choice Mailer quotes. Just in case you may have misplaced it.

Best,

Gerry