police from the scene of the assassination of President Kennedy are being re-examined by a photographic expert for the Federal Bureau of Invastigation. The expert was sent herefrom Washington on orders from the Rockefeller Commission, which is investigating Central Intelligence Agency involvement in domestic affairs, according to Herb Grubert, an assistant special agent of the bureau.

The pictures, mostly taken by newsmen covering the assassination in 1963, show three men who were temporarily detained by the police who converged on the assassination site after the shots that killed the President.

Compiracy theorists contend that two of the men have strong resemblances to convicted in the Watergate break-in. E. Howard Hunt Jr. and Frank A. Sturgis, both of whom had associations with the C.I.A.

original negatives of the controversial pictures this week and reconstructed the manner in which the pictures were down to the distance from the ground the person who took the pictures held his camera, explained Mr. Grugbert.

Then, the Washington-based expert took new photographs from the exact spots the original negatives of the controversial pictures which the pictures were snaped.

By duplicating the distances and angles and by locating reference points that appear in both the 1963 photos and angles and by locating reference points that appear in both the 1963 photos and weights of the three men who were released by the Dallas police in 1963. He will also be able to obtain details of bone structure and other individual traits by comparative analysis, Mr. Grubert said.
