THE WASHINGTON POST Friday, Dec. 19, 1969

Shaw Trial Judge Held in Vice Raid

By David Snyder Special to The Washington Post

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 18-1 some prominent people might Judge Edward A. Haggerty, be involved. who presided at the Clay Shaw trial, was back on the bench judge just happened into the today after his arrest in a stag party brawl with police.

"Oh, well," he remarked to not coming to an end."

Judge Haggerty was booked last night on charges of conspiring to commit obscenity, soliciting for prostitution, simple battery on police, and re-Criminal Court Building.

It was in Judge Haggerty's courtroom that Shaw was found innocent of charges on a couch in the motel room, brought by District Attorney to kill President Kennedy in rights. Dallas.

Lawyer's Statement

Robert Zibilich, the judge's attorney, said Haggerty was attending a "before-the-wedding bachelor's party," long a tradition in New Orleans.

Police were at the scene about three hours before they moved in. Newsmen were on hand well before the raid and duly recorded the wild disorder in the motel room as Haggerty attempted to get past police.

He struggled with three vice squad officers for more than a | 1 minute before he was finally I subdued on the floor, his wrists handcuffed behind his back.

A police spokesman denied that there was any conspiracy to "get" Haggerty.

In New Orleans the news media are routinely invited along on raids. A television station checked a police source to find out what was involved in the raid and learned that "some prominent people" m'at he involved. The Timesso learned that

Said a police officer, "The circumstances.'

Three Women Arrested

Judge Haggerty was arrested a photographer, "the world's with 13 other persons—including three shapely women-in a police vice squad raid aimed at gambling and a "stag show."

Police said they found a $5 admission fee being charged at the door, stag movies being sisting arrest during the vice shown and "live entertainsquad raid on a motel near the ment" being conducted. They said they also broke up a handbook operation.

After the judge had been a police officer began to in-Jim Garrison that he conspired form him of his constitutional

Haggerty interrupted the officer saying, "Well now, I think I should know those ..."

United Press International

Vice squad officers struggle with Judge Haggerty in motel.

Associated Press

New Orleans Judge Edward Haggerty Jr., who presided at Clay Shaw trial, shields face after arrest at stag party.