Dear Harold,

I received your 3/3 letter and do feel for what you are going through!! After 3+ years as a caregiver for my late brother and observing others since he was in a nursing home, I think I have somewhat of a feel for what is occurring with you!!! Shakespeare was right - there are 7 stages of man with the first and seventh being similar!!! I really don't know what to do or say - all one can do is play the hand that was dealt!!!! One loses patience with persons who get laid off and moan to everyone else, "Why me??" The old adage - if you are given lemons make lemonade - does not work!! I have found - first you need the lemons!!! I can only advise from experience: DO THE BEST YOU CAN!!! The whole deal runs on money and when that gives out ????? I feel sorry that my late brother, sister, mom and dad could not benefit from the development of our farm. The folks had a tough time of it 69 years ago scraping up and committing to $3000 for 40 acres!! And now it is the last highlands around the Twin Cities and brought $437,000!!!! The developer has raised lots from max of $69,000 to $90,000!!!! Nobody misses a trick!! We could have developed it ourselves, but, the city did not want that and kept requesting roads, catch basins, etc which required a half million dollars in advance of developing!!! Plus all the permits and fees!!! I am sad that the rest of the family could not benefit from those hard times! You wrote that Lil goes back to the Revolution - and today, kids think those people were fools for putting up a fight!!!! Our farm saved many people (mostly relatives) during the Depression which is grossly ~~misunderstood~~ misunderstood by today's youth!! Most of the people "sponged" as I recall from my extreme youth. I could never ~~figure~~ figure how my folks could buy, plant and raise the stuff and others could drag it off for free!!! When I got big enough, things changed. People even would comment about it since everything had a price!!!

Enough of that, I know it does not help you at all!!

One credit card company wrote me that they would take a late charge off my bill "in the name of good customer relations." I sent them a copy of the check, dated, cashed and deposited before the deadline!! Some customer relations!!!! The NY catalog company I ordered Christmas presents from, called me on my answer machine instead of writing. I never gave them my number in my letter of complaint!! I want their excuse in writing since I was greatly humiliated and embarrassed by them - all things today's juries and judges like to hear. I wrote the catalog people that I would never use a catalog again for gifts!! There is an old saying that a cat that sat on a hot stove lid will never sit on another hot one!!! Or a cold one, either!!! What promised to be a relaxing exercise became a nightmare!!!!

All this is trivia next to what you are going through!!!!
Too bad about the mushrooms on your no-no list. They, too, are among my favorite foods. I even like them fried and on a sandwich! The insurance does not live up to its promises. The doctor said my late brother COULD NOT be removed from the hospital's intensive care, but, some little poppsie in an insurance office halfway across the country said he had to be moved - and that was on New Year's Day!!!! And he was moved over our objections. And then "they" charged for an emergency trip!!!!

He was on the CMSP of low vs
high cost

The JFK case keeps frustrating the researchers. I have many times charted out a graph to see whose name comes up most. It is most often "Nixon." Also I find that the CIA is prominent even though it was and is banned by law from domestic affairs. The third thing I have found is that the authorities were on a "GO" trip or "Get Oswald." Once evidence or material or data pointed that way, why bother to check out the entire thing??? Once LHO was "it," that's enough!! I can imagine the "experts" all wearing "GO" T-shirts and badges!! We did that in the old days of computerdom!! Once a competitor wiped out our industry-leading computer system, our R&D boys were assigned to catch up and pass up!!!! The secret project was given a code name and the engineers involved were given T-shirts with the project name on it (like the "GO" thing)!!! At Control Data the thing got so "hot" that we issued buttons (like big campaign shields) to anyone who got near it. It was an honor to wear a button that said, "I touched the Z"!! The "GO" episode reeked of that type of approach!! Your WHITEWASH Series, using only WR and official dogma, destroyed that reasoning!!!!

This whole sad affair should have never been possible!! It seems that the Dealy Plaza situation was "set up" just for the assassination to occur!!!! Pardon me, but, as one researches and puts events together, "that is what comes out of the pile!!!! The Plaza event was set up, even scheduled," like a scene in a play! It is difficult to conclude otherwise!!!
Best of luck and everything,

Paul Haller
