Dear Matt,

Again, hurried thanks. Enclosed are those few things from the file I thought might interest you on King.

If you get a chance, I'd appreciate it very much if you would make this copy of a Godfrey Kirkpatrick picture his mother has-and any others she may find. If Louis can not do it soon I asked him today to ask you. If you get a free moment on your way into New Orleans, she is just a little over a block from St. Charles, to the left and on the left side of Jackson, going from St. Charles, a corner house, yellow. If you go there, please try and make a shot of the house and of the attacked slave quarters.

When I told D that I had a picture of him on a boat (she is the exclusive source of knowledge of his interest in boating) she asked if she were in it, saying that such a picture had been taken of then, by a woman, when they were in a blue Lightning class sailboat.

Is there anyone at the Marine who takes pictures there who might be able to supply other shots, which also might include him with other people?

The damage to my baggage is more extensive than I'd thought. The bag will have to be replaced, the typewriter has been, and all the notes I had in the bag are gone. Fortunately, they are of expenses and people I'd seen, nothing confidential. But I guess there remains no doubt of what happened to my baggage.

Hope I can get there again soon.

Sincerely,
