Dear Carol,

To describe your behavior as merely bad is to praise it. It is unconscionable and there can be no excuse for it. Considering my age, the state of my health and the fact that you promised on graduation from Hood and needed the work that you would complete what you had undertaken by the end of the summer. The summer of 1994.

After your last phone call, in May, I wrote you the enclosed letter.

You did not respond. It therefore confirms the understanding we then had.

When some time passed and I finally got in touch with the student who was to take over what you were working on she said she had found it impossible to get in touch with you by leaving messages on your machine and that she then wrote you. Getting no response she assumed incorrectly that you have given me what she was to have gotten from you. Her letter is dated August 26. I then wrote you on August 29. I asked for the immediate return of what you have that is my property. This includes what you said you would correct and the diskette.

As you know from having made duplicate diskettes for them and because I told you the work I am doing is for the record for history and for deposits at several colleges. It happens that a month ago one of the professors who was to get a copy was here with his wife. They volunteered to finish up what you started and have not returned. That you have made that impossible is seriously hurtful and abusive.

I phoned you at your place of work on Monday. The woman who answered the phone said you were there. She switched me so I could leave a message on your machine. When you ignored that I phoned again yesterday. I was told you were there but that someone was with you. I left a message explaining my call and asked that you return my call as soon as you were free. As you know, you ignored that, too.

Aside from outrageously bad behavior I regard what you have done as stealing what belongs to me, and I have records of payment for it, it not also larceny after trust. I am quite prepared to learn if this is true and if you would like to face such charges I'll see if I can arrange that. You will find that not inexpensive.

And if you would like me to make a record of this at Hood for the information of anyone seeking a recommendation or asking about your record from your very bad behavior I would be willing to do that.

I expect the immediate return of all you have that belongs to me and I want to be certain that you take no chances on anything happening to it before you hand it to me. I do mean immediate, too.

With acute disappointment and disgust,

Dear Carol,

Rebecca Price, the Hood student who wanted work and was to take over from you has done nothing. It was not until this weekend, when she did answer the phone, that I not only learned that but also that you had not gotten the work you have to her and that she had not gotten it from you.

I called your previous phone number and got a recorded announcement for a Sheryl, not for you. I left a message asking for your number and in two days there has been no response.

I am, of course, quite anxious to get the work you have and will appreciate it if you will please arrange to return it.

We hope you are well and happy and that your work is not overwhelming.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
