Dear Rebecca,

After getting your letter dated August 26 I made efforts to get in touch with Carol Beck where she had lived in Frederick and where she works in Washington. Getting no response I phoned her at work Monday and when she did not return my call although she was there, I called her again yesterday. Yesterday I left a message with the person who answered the phone. She did not respond. I've just written her as severely as I'd prefer not to have to write to you.

In your letter of May 8 you said you have completed through Chapter 7 and that I had given you the copy through Chapter 11. I presume that wanting work you did nothing since then because I do not recall getting anything from you.

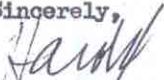

In any event I want all you have, including the diskette and I want it as soon as you can arrange for bringing it to me. If you cannot do that I'll come for it. But if there are any stairs you'll have to bring it to me because stairs are too dangerous for me to use them.

Frankly, with the passing of time I've lost track of some of this but you should be able to tell me fully and accurately what if anything I have that you corrected. You should also have the diskette. That is especially important to me. I have a professor and his wife waiting to continue that work. They have been waiting for a month. I just heard from them again yesterday.

If you have returned any of this, given my lack of mobility I think it will be better if you can arrange for someone to bring you here and show it to me. It would be in the file on that book.

I am very disappointed that you wasted a ~~month~~^{summer} on which this could have been worked on for me when at my age and in the state of my health I cannot expect to be able to this work much longer.

If you have any use for the copyholder I paid for you can keep it. If not I'd like to have it.

Sincerely,

Harold Weisberg
