

JL-I think I have begun to tap that vast, ignored natural resource, womanpower! A carload just dropped in yesterday morning with the beau of one, who took the others off as their personal needs required. Last to go were this student and her boy friend. Before they left, after lunch, she asked is there were not something that could help immediately. I said that if there were any students not too busy, mounting my Foreman clips for your use in court could help. Beau is a professional photog(remember, friend) and has a hot-mount process. They are picking these clips up next weekend and will mount them. They also offered to arrange them. Now I strongly urge that you consider how you will want to use them. I think these women would want to do as much for you as they can. I suggested that perhaps cards on selected subjects referred to each clip on each subject and the mounted clips in chronological order. You decide for you will use. Also suggest that you let me know any other clipping files or subjects you would like handled this way, first mounting, then arranging retrieval. And what size cards you want. I use 3x5, you may want larger. Advantage 3x5: can work into card file I am establishing based on book indexes and other card files I have. When you have time for thinking, think first of immediate, then not distant future, then long-range simple projects like this on the chance I can find volunteers. So far none of these women is local, which limits summertime possibilities. After she finishes some honors work about 4/15 I will be talking to the one who is working on the King assassination. She is pre-law senior, history major, and very bright. Very youthful, too. HW 3/31/74
