Dear Jeffrey Boyle,

From the time of our November meeting, which coincided with the first of my snow here, I have been extraordinarily occupied with FOIA affidavits in addition to the usual matters. We've had about two snows a week, some heavy, and I've had to keep our long lane clear. Shortly after I was at Bridgewater I also had a (hopefully temporary) medical reverse. To keep up with the FOIA work alone I've had to let most other things slide.

However, I did read your Wound Analysis some time ago, in bits and pieces, alas. I just did not have time to write.

We have the disagreements of which you know from your familiarity with my work. Nothing in yours changed what I believe.

I disagree quite strongly over the wound in the front of the nose. It is my recollection, perhaps faulty, that you ignored what I regard as credible evidence.

I'm sorry I did not have time to write when my recollections were clearer and that I do not now have time to reread it for further comment.

If your piece for Burke on the acoustical evidence contains anything new of course I'd like to read it but I will not have time to engaged in correspondence over it. The work required by these FOIA cases is very great and I'm snowed under with a very large accumulation of matters to which I must attend, including very much more FOIA work.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Weisberg,

It is my hope that by now you have had a chance to review
the articles and WOUND ANALYSIS
I sent to you last December.

I met you at your Bridgewater
State College talk)

If you have the time I would appreciate any and all comments and criticisms you have on my work. (Especially in re
the medical evidence.)

Many unexpected car troubles have shot holes in this monthly budget but I hope to have extra $ next month to sent for PHOTOGRAPHIC WHITEWASH. You should be hearing from me.

I just sent a 3+ page article to J.W. Burke (editor of Grassy Knoll Gayette) if you'd like a copy.
(on circumstantial evidence)

I know you frown upon the newsletters, but I do take my work seriously and do not support theories you term "crazy stuff."

If anything, I'm pretty conservative in my writings.

Hope you are in good health and look forward to a reply if you have the time

Sincerely,
Jeff Hale
