Dear Survivors too,

You ask about the aloe vera as Lil is taking a nap. I think she'd appreciate a new cutting. It doesn't look all that good lately.

There are virtually no factual, assassination books. I've a manuscript for the record for history on them that is more than 60 chapters long and is still growing. And my chapters are not short. I just xeroxed one of 37 pages.

So I'll be glad to get those two. Along with any reviews you did.

I can't say in the literal sense that we are both doing well but considering that we've accumulated 165 years, close to 167, between us, we can't be doing all that badly.

Lil needs a hip replacement on which she has not made up her mind and today I began additional therapy for my right side which is now so weak I can't start taking stairs with my right leg and can't use them at all unless they are short and with a hand-rail.

We have his-and-her canes and we have had his-and-her walkers prescribed. Lil sometimes uses hers outside and I've not gotten one.

I hope you've had better news on Henry Wade than when last we spoke.

And glad that you are still percolating

Our best to you all,

Harold

Dear Hal and Lil,

I had a slight setback - a minor heart attack - but was in the hospital only four days. Thanks to a drug called Ismo, I am feeling much better.

I am still working and plan to continue to do so. I enjoy writing my column and need the medical benefits.

We transplanted the Alocasia from which we made your cutting. It is doing great in its new pot. How is your plant doing?

I have two books I hope to get into the mail to you. Neither is very factual.

Hope you are doing well.

Holiday greetings and best wishes for a bright and wonderful new year!
