CASTRO'S SISTER GETS GOLDEN MIKE

NO VOICE IS TOO WEAK

(Complete, unedited text of Juanita Castro's speech).

By Juanita Castro

I am most grateful to The Information Council of the Americas for giving me this opportunity of coming before you and speaking about a situation which has become an international affair but is commonly referred to as "the Cuba case."

I should first, however, like to clarify my position in this for it must be difficult for you to understand how it is possible that a person could testify publicly against a brother. You naturally must realize how difficult it would be to stand by and watch your own brother deliberately wreck your country. In spite of being Fidel Castro's sister, I come here, just as any other Cuban exile would, to denounce the monstrosities which my brother, Fidel Castro, has perpetrated during the past five years. I come here, just as I will go to each and every corner of the continent of America, any place where people are willing to sit and listen to the truth about the first (and may he be the last) communist dictator on our American continent.

I want to be sure that you understand that the division which has been produced within my family does not stem from the usual type of family quarrelling. There is a most fundamental reason for it, just like most people of the United States, was brought up in the warmth of a home which always centered around religious and democratic traditions.

At home we were taught to love God above everything. We received deep religious training and our parents saw to it that we learned how to love one another. This love of God has been a predominant factor in my life. Fidel, however, in what must be the most undecipherable farce in history, shut down churches and

In an emotion stirring moment, as a thousand guests and members rise in standing ovation, Señorita Juanita Castro holds the INCA Golden Microphone Award presented to her at the annual INCA Awards Dinner on January 18th. religious schools, erased the name of God from our constitution and placed instead the despicable image of Lenin on the altars of our churches.

This is why I am here. I had to choose between God and Fidel. And, since it is not difficult to decide between oppression and liberty or between crime and respect for the property of others or between a bad brother and good, sound principles . . . I chose to fight, while I was still in Cuba, to do what I could to regain freedom for my country. When it became obvious that my brother had found out about my underground activities, I was forced to leave the country and thus you find me continuing my fight on these lands. No matter how small my contribution may be . . . and I am thinking of the words of José, Martí, Cuba's Abraham Lincoln . . . "no

1000 CHEER!

By Louis M. Reese

Juanita Castro, anti-communist sister of Cuba's Red dictator, blasted the myth that her brother's 20th of July revolution turned to Communism because of any alleged "aggressive attitude" by the United States toward Cuba in 1959 or '60. Featured guest speaker at the annual INCA AWARDS DINNER, held Monday evening, January 18, 1965, in the International Room of the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, Señorita Castro revealed "The scheme to communize Cuba was incubated in Mexico in 1955 . . . It was here that the idea for the sale of my country to International Communism was first conceived. It was around the end of 1955 or very beginning of 1956 that my brother, Fidel, first contacted the Soviet Union through their alleged 'diplomats' in Mexico."

After a moving invocation by Father Elmo Romogosa, Archdiocesan Information director, the enthusiastic dinner crowd of 1000 was greeted by Edgar A. G. Bright, INCA Awards and Arrangements Committee Chairman.

Golden Mike Given

Señorita Castro received an INCA Golden Microphone Award in recognition of her "outstanding service to the cause of liberty under law in the Americas." INCA President Dr. Alton Ochsner, in presenting the award to Miss Castro, said that she "is the bravest person I've known; a sister who left her country to expose Communism . . ."

According to INCA General Counsel Gibbons Burke who served as Toastmaster for the event, the "Golden Mike" has been awarded to only three persons in the past; posthumously to William G. Zetzmann, Sr., as a "fighter for freedom in the Americas"; to screen star John Gavin, for his rescue work in Latin America while in the U. S. Navy and as speaker

INCA THANKS POLICE

New Orleans, Jefferson, and Louisiana State Police were honored with certificates of appreciation presented by the Information Council of the Americas at INCA headquarters, 620 Gravier Street, on Wednesday, February 3. The certificates were awarded in recognition of the "exceptionally well done job of providing security for Miss Juanita Castro during her recent INCA sponsored visit to New Orleans," said Dr. Alton Ochsner, INCA President.

Robert R. Rainold, INCA Chief of Security, said that "three words most typify their actions in planning and executing the program of protection; friendliness, cooperation, and proficiency. At all times and under all circumstances, they were each a credit to our fine police."

Edgar A. G. Bright, Vice-President for Organizational Affairs, cited several officers for "efficient and effective leadership, dependability, and ingenuity."

The brief ceremony at INCA's international headquarters in the New Orleans central business district said tribute to "the technical competence and ability exhibited by each member of the security detail in planning and carrying out the operation," said Rainold, who coordinated the security arrangements for INCA.

voice is too weak to render tribute." Now, if you will permit me to do so, I shall relate some of the facts, many of which you undoubtedly have read in the newspapers or heard on the radio or TV but to which I can add a most personal touch for I was present when many of these atrocities were "ordered" by my brother and heard not only the commands but the cynical comments which Fidel would utter after issuing his orders.

Although Fidel Castro has said that communism in Cuba is the direct result of the aggressive attitude which the United States took toward the Cuban revolution, this is not true. Neither is it true that Cuba has become a pawn of the Soviet Union and Red China because Fidel was always a card-carrying member of the Communist Party. It is this very ease with which Fidel blurts out shocking and contradictory statements such as these that enables him to continue to fool so many people.

The scheme to communize Cuba was incubated in Mexico in 1955. He had gone to Mexico after he was pardoned for having master-minded the July 26, 1953, attack on "Moncada" Army Headquarters in the city of Santiago de Cuba. He had spent two years in prison and left for Mexico the minute he was released.

In Mexico, he and his friends were joined, in some mysterious fashion, by a "stateless" adventurer nicknamed "Che" Guevara. It was here that the idea for the sale of my country to international communism was first conceived. It was around the end of 1955 or very beginning of 1956 that my brother, Fidel, first contacted the Soviet Union through their alleged "diplomats" in Mexico. time, was Fidel's contact with the old guard of Cuba's Communist Party. And it was Che Guevara who sought out help from all other Communist Parties throughout the American continent for it was he who had direct contact with the Reds in Guatemala, Argentina, Uruguay and toher countries.

Although at this particular time Fidel took great pains in carefully concealing his intrigues and contacts with the very worst enemies of Humanity, I was to hear later many of the anecdotes and stories of this episode in conversations my brother had with his "bosom" pals in Cuba and that is why I am so convinced of their veracity.

And thus began the worst acts of treason ever to have been committed on the American continent in the United States, the "Yankee" dollars were widely collected to arm Fidel's army but he missed no opportunity to step on the patriotic and democratic principles for which stood the faces of those represented on those same dollars. This powerful nation, historically Cuba's ally, was to produce most of the arms, money and equipment for the expeditions which were the mainstay of my brother's rise to power. But he . . . who has never been known to be grateful . . . had already agreed to sell Cuba to the communist bloc.

This brings us that moment, six years ago, when the Cuban revolution triumphed. From the very first moment, American investors and even the United States government indicated a willingness to give the new Cuban government economic aid. Fidel was informed, through his Minister of Finance, Rufo López Fresquet, that many important American businessmen were interested in investing in Cuba (this would have created many new jobs on the island) and were even willing to bolster Cuba's economy with truly favorable, low interest loans.

But from the very beginning Fidel turned his back on democracy. He was much too busy at that time executing thousands of Cubans at his infamous "wall" and flirting with Russia to listen to his democratic friends.

One of the things that lingers foremost in my memory is now naive some people were . . . either because they knew nothing of politics or because they were just held spell-bound by Fidel . . . and how these people unwittingly helped Fidel literally hand the island over to Russia.

People from Cuba's powerful middle class . . . doctors, business men, etc. . . the very ones who have to go, come the communist state, were the ones who willingly helped Fidel carry out his mad projects.

Within the first fifteen months of existence . . . more or less . . . the Revolutionary Government confiscated all commercial establishments, real-estate, and private enterprises. Paradoxically, the owners of all of these had been singing the praises of the revolution high to the heavens . . . until the day that their own "chips" were swept away.

I recall one well-known Cuban industrialist who owned one of the largest breweries in the country. The poor man really believed in the "honesty" of Fidel's words. He worked tirelessly for the Agrarian Reform . . . the law which Fidel used to confiscate the lands of many of the men who had toiled for many, long years in order to create "something" . . . One day, while he was dedicating all of his efforts to help solve some of the problems in the "Agrarian Reform" our unhappy industrialist was informed his brewery too had gone to the communists.

I was present on another occasion when Fidel ordered the intervention of a chain of department stores . . . the owners of which had donated over a million dollars to the revolution. These businessmen, like many of you, had been frivolously indifferent to the role that communism played in the government set-up and always thought that they would be immune from Moscow's clutches.

But the Red claws reached them as well as all others, professionals or not, and today all of them are considered to be enemies of the communist "ideology". Such was the case of one Cuba's top, internally known, industrialist, Mr. Pepin, Bosch, president of the Bacardi Rum Company and the Hatuey brewery.

Mr. Bosch has been, for years, one of democracy's foremost standard bearers. He collaborated with the revolution my brother headed but he was among the first to realize even before the fall of Batista's regime, that the revolution had been handed over to international communism. He made this known to those closest to him.

In the first months of 1959, when Fidel came to these United States, my brother wanted to be accompanied by men of great prestige in U. S. business and U. S. Government circles. The first person whom Fidel invited on this trip was Mr. Pepin Bosch. He refused at first but relented, when he was told by Fidel that "your presence on this trip will benefit Cuba, and Cuba alone." Mr. Bosch's presence lasted but a few hours. He quickly sensed what was happening and flew back to Havana, saying, upon his arrival, "This is communism . . . and of the worst kind."

Upon hearing of this, Fidel said nothing. He returned to Cuba and the very next day "passed" a law imposing the highest and most arbitrary tax imaginable on beer. That day, I remember, Fidel was speaking to Mr. Miguel Angel Quevedo, publisher of "Bohemia" magazine. He told him: "From here on out, Pepin isn't going to feel much like attacking my revolution."

But Fidel was wrong. Today, Mr. Bosch is one of the bitterest enemies of the communist system that Fidel directs and he has placed both his life and his fortune to serve the cause of Cuba's liberation. You who are intelligent people governed by intelligent people, must realize how completely absurd it is to live in a country where laws, taxes and all general government measures are dictated only to benefit or hurt personal friends or foes of the head of the government.

I, who have known Fidel all of my life, do not doubt that he is a monomaniac. He has always placed himself over and above everything else. I shall now describe one of the many incidents which clearly proves this fact.

Cuba produced a surgeon who occupied a truly high place in the world's medical roster. You may possibly have heard of some of his outstanding surgical achievements. His name is Dr. Antonio Rodriguez Diaz and he was, for many years, the doctor of Cuba's top families. It was logical, therefore, that when Fidel came into power, that Dr. Rodriguez Diaz, who was also a personal friend of Fidel's, should assume the responsibility of guarding the health of Cuba's new leader. It was thanks to his skill as a surgeon that Fidel's son and my nephew, Fidelito, pulled through after suffering great injury in an automobile accident. Fidel, who is most apprehensive by nature, used to spend a great deal of time having all kinds of physical check-ups with Dr. Rodriguez Diaz. The doctor even performed quite a delicate operation on Fidel shortly after the revolution first triumphed.

But, besides being a surgeon Dr. Rodriguez Diaz was also the owner of a large farm which produced cattle, tobacco and other agricultural products. When Fidel signed into law the Agrarian Reform decree which had been drafted by old-guard communist Carlos Fajal Rodriguez, the doctor's lands met their "communizing" fate and passed into the hands of the red government.

A short time later, Dr. Rodriguez Diaz decided to leave Cuba as he had done most all of Cuba's great doctors and other professionals in general. Fidel found out about the plans of his top medical man and went to see him. "Antonio," Fidel said, "I have come to ask you to stay."

Dr. Rodriguez Diaz presented my brother with all the arguments which had made him decide to leave Cuba: the aggression the regime had launched against the medical profession, the violation of all of man's natural rights, the little respect that existed for human life in general. Fidel unsuccessfully exhausted his entire line of persuasion. He offered the doctor the post of Minister of Health (which Dr. Rodriguez Diaz promptly refused) . . . but to no avail.

The doctor then told my brother: "Listen, Fidel, I have spent my entire life working only to live to see communists taking the land which I neither stole nor inherited."

Fidel then answered, and I quote, "Look, Antonio, we are going to make a deal: you are going to take care of me and I am going to take care of your land. My health comes before all communist laws."

Today, Dr. Rodriguez Diaz is "re-validating" his medical studies at a hospital in the city of Ponce in Puerto Rico, where he is but another Cuban doctor who is trying to pass examinations in foreign lands in an effort to continue practicing the one thing he really knows how to do.

But of one thing you can be certain . . . Every time Fidel feels one of those many aches and pains and he has to subject himself to examination by one of those unskilled hands that his regime has "graduated" from medical school after only a few months of training, Fidel misses the genius of Dr. Rodriguez Diaz.

As time went on, the communist regime took over all "clinics" which was the name given to privately-owned hospitals. All hospitals were then in the hands of doctors who had embraced the communist doctrine. It did not matter if these men were professionally inferior to others who were anti-communist or simply apolitical.

In this same manner, all sectors of life in the nation started to crumble. Fidel was the first to see to it that would be done. One lady, only because she was decently dressed appeared clean, was outrageously insulted on the streets of Havana. For a man to wear a tie and suit was considered an offense by the "vulgar cracy" that surrounded my dear brother.

Decency itself came to be a crime and men and women in my country even lost their right to raise the children according to their own traditions, religions or customs.

One of the last times that I was with Fidel was when our mother was seriously ill, on the verge of death. For any other human being, the loss of one as dear as one's own mother cannot but provoke a wave of sadness.

But this was not what my brother felt. He "dedicated" a few minutes to her funeral and these were spent bawling out those of us who wanted to have our mother given a Christian burial (which is what she had).

I have wanted to tell you of the purely personal moments, incidents which I am revealing for the first time, because I believe that many of you are doctors and you may be able to analyze Fidel in purely psychiatric terms for his complex and unfortunate personality would be a challenge even to the best of you.

But the aggressions of the communist regime of Cuba have not been confined to members of the middle class (professionals or businessmen). A new class has been created there similar to that described by Milov Djilas . . . and this new class enjoys all the luxuries, bourgeois pleasures (to use their words) mistreating and humiliating the majority of workers and peasants who have not joined the United Party of the Socialist Revolution (PURS) which was created by my brother on Moscow orders to corrode the framework of the government and to export the hideous system to the other nations on the Continent, none of which is safe from the hammer and sickle threat.

His obsession for power led him to state one day (I was present) that "some day I will walk along Fifth Avenue and New York will be under communist rule." This may seem like day dreaming . . . at best ridiculous at worst, distant . . . and is practically impossible. But it doesn't seem at all abnormal to Fidel that such a thing could happen because he is convinced that in many circles in the country . . . either because the seriousness of the communist threat not realized or for other reasons which I am not in a position to detail . . . have placed important organs of communication, very valuable radio and TV time, and well-known publishers cial advisor to Secretary General Jose Mora of the Organization of American States (OAS); and to Dr. Alton Ochsner for his humanitarian efforts in Latin America as both physician and citizen.

Accepting the award, Miss Castro said, "I appreciate, from the bottom of my heart, this beautiful gesture. I accept it gratefully and I wish to offer it to all those from this country who have died in the defense of liberty and democracy and to all the dead of my country who, day by day, fall, searching for Cuba's freedom."

Obviously moved, tears streaming down her face, she continued: "And, I wish to sincerely congratulate INCA, which has become the great wall of truth into which the malignant international Communist movement will crash and perish. Thank you."

Methvin Article Lauded
Edward Seannell Butler, INCA Executive Vice-President, introduced another Golden Mike winner, Eugene H. Methvin, with the Reader's Digest in Washington, D. C. Mr. Methvin's article "How the Reds Make a Plot", in which INCA was featured, appeared in the January, 1965, issue of Reader's Digest. Commenting on the awardee's achievements, Butler said that Methvin "developed most of the information that made last summer not such a long one, and not such a hot one." This was in reference to Methvin's efforts at exposing Communist attempts to instigate riots in the United States.

"For a number of years," said Methvin, "I have pondered the problem of the Cold War and bothered the bureaucrats in Washington and experts around the country. But, I had to come to New Orleans to find someone with a really fresh idea . . . about how to counteract Communism . . . and to find people with the imagination and initiative to put it into effect."

Methvin said that Lenin once commented, "Give me an organization of professional revolutionaries and I will turn the world upside down."

and he has turned our century upside down."

Commenting on the INCA concept, Methvin said that Butler's basic idea was: "Let's have an organization of professional Conflict Managers and we can turn the world rightside up again."

St. John, Harris, Honored
The Golden Mike was awarded in absentia to Dr. George St. John of Hobe Sound, Florida, "for his services as Chairman of the first concentration of INCA members outside of New Orleans and for raising thousands of dollars . . . for INCA . . . in that area," said R. Kirk Moyer, INCA Vice-President for TRUTH FORUM. Brigadier General Authur Harris, U. S. A. (ret.), also of Hobe Sound, received the award for Dr. St. John.

Gen. Harris, much decorated by this country and several Latin American nations, received a Golden Mike to acknowledge his outstanding service to the liberty and security of the hemisphere. General Harris played a key role in organizing the INCA group on Jupiter Island. General Harris earned a huge round of applause when he recalled his first visit to New Orleans as a proud young lieutenant leading a company down Canal Street on horseback, on the occasion of the Centennial of the War of 1812. "It is grand to be back for the sesquicentennial," he said.

Morrison Praised
Dean A. E. Papale, INCA First Vice-President, struck a nostalgic chord when he cited another award winner, the late Hon. deLesseps S. Morrison, former New Orleans mayor and OAS ambassador. Said Papale: "INCA, in its infancy, needed strength, needed support . . . I have a folder full of correspondence which attests to the courage, the encouragement, and support that he gave us from the very beginning. And, he stood every ready to help us in any way he could."

Accepting the award for his father, deLesseps S. "Tony" Morrison, Jr. said, "He envisioned, some day, a closely unified western hemisphere—culturally, politically, and economically—and a lasting bond of friendship between the peoples of North, Central, and South America. It is my hope that his efforts and vision will not be in vain. And, with a fine organization like INCA, I don't think they will be."

On behalf of the entire Cuban refugee community in New Orleans, Exile leader Carlos Bringuier of the Directorio Revolucionario Estudiantil, presented the flag of Free Cuba to Señorita Castro.

Ochsner, Butler Speak
The audience heard brief messages about the history and progress of INCA.

Dr. Ochsner told the story of INCA which began over three years ago as "the brainchild of Ed Butler" to fight the "worst battle we've ever fought" against Communism.

He said at first it was such a "big undertaking" that it seemed "like a nebulous dream" to some. However, through the "hard work and dedicated devotion of those who believe in TRUTH" INCA has grown from one man's dream to an organization of over "120 Latin American stations" and "over 300 stations in the U. S." He explained that INCA uses refugee testimony for its TRUTH TAPES because "they can tell what happened like no one else can."

As "concrete evidence of what INCA has done and is doing", Ochsner cited the published statements of missionaries who have commended the TRUTH TAPES, and the recent history of Venezuela and Chile.

In Venezuela the Communist terror campaign designed to frighten the majority of voters into staying home so the Communists could win, was defeated when a barrage of TRUTH TAPES were broadcast through 17 INCA cooperating stations. "Over 97% of the people voted, a record for any nation", Ochsner said.

In Chile Señorita Castro's TRUTH TAPED statements were beamed to the women through 21 INCA stations and, while the men split their vote 50-50 the women (who use separate ballot boxes) voted in "overwhelming majority" against the Communists, Ochsner said. "But, he concluded, we feel we've only started and that there is a great deal more to do."

Following Dr. Ochsner, INCA Executive Vice-President Butler spoke of INCA's progress and its plans for the future. He asked the audience to open their copies of the booklet "Cuba: Terror and Death . . ." which had been distributed through the courtesy of Señorita Castro. Exhibiting poignant photos of children and old people who have suffered and died in the horror of Communist Cuba, he said "This is the reason we are doing what we are doing. It could be our parents, our children."

Butler commended Manuel Gil, INCA Production Manager, and Louis Reese, INCA Operations Manager for their unseen sacrifices on behalf of the organization.

He said that the private INCA operation was vitally important because it eliminated the need to combine "two powers that should never be combined—the power to govern and the power to propagandize." He pointed to the unholy alliance of Hitler and Goebbels as an example of what happens to a nation when these powers are combined.

Speaking of the new INCA network of United States radio stations, Butler warned that Castro had launched a two-pronged propaganda attack against America, designed first to persuade the U. S. public that Communism in Cuba was "here to stay"; and on the other hand to recruit rioters and assassins like Lee Harvey Oswald, whom Butler debated a few weeks before he shot President Kennedy.

Butler said that we should not be surprised if "what happened in Dallas, happens in New Orleans" because Communist propaganda is hitting here, and recruiting adherents. "Communists know if you get a grip on the mind you can manipulate the trigger finger by remote control," he said.

"Oswald was a soldier" said Butler, "a soldier they did not have to pay, clothe, feed or house; who could be ordered with propaganda by remote control."

Liberty Under Law Upheld
Willard E. Robertson, INCA Awards Dinner Liaison Committee Chairman commented, "I am sure that if they were here that the combined statements of both Governor McKeithen and Mayor Schiro on this occasion would be feelings of deep admiration . . . to the lady whose bravery and unwavering devotion to houses at Fidel's disposal by permitting them to paint a false picture of the true and tragic situation which prevails in Cuba. Who are responsible? Usually men who are either lacking in capacity or are not acting in good faith or are too naive. These are the ones that have been permitted to go to my country to write the reports which reach the American public.

In order to further substantiate my words, I shall continue to relate another incident. More than a year ago, a well-known New York newspaper sent a photographer and a newspaperman to Cuba to do a series of articles on the socialist revolution. I am sure that many of you must have seen the rotogravures of that New York newspaper which carried "human interest" shots of children hugging Fidel, rows of people hailing the master as he promenade along with the foreign correspondents.

What you don't see in the photographs is the rehearsing that has gone into the shooting of the scene. These are children of card-carrying Communist Party members, part of the "new class," who have been perfectly trained for such occasions. So please, from now on, when you see a photograph of my brother Fidel, surrounded by many children, hailed by old ladies, workers and peasants, be sure and smile for believe me, there are no spontaneous acclamations in Cuba. Everything is always carefully drilled under strict Communist Party control.

This is why it is so necessary to tell and repeat the truth about Cuba. The dramatic example which Cuba is must not go to waste. It must be used to save the rest of the Hemisphere. We must enlighten opinions which have been formed on very superficial appreciation of facts. We must correct these misconceptions and delve down into what the "Cuba case" really is.

Do not be led astray by the propaganda of international communism. They are experts in twisting lies and deceptions into popular slogans, articles and editorials. They use universities, high schools, and useful idiots. They use anything and everything they can lay their hands on and can maneuver to their advantage.

Therefore, when you see what seems like brilliant reporting, such as that which I recently saw in a well-known American magazine, showing the world the marvels of one of the most modern rice plantations in Latin America, check back a little. You will find that this rice plantation was thriving in Cuba years before Fidel's takeover. All he has done is change the original name.

This is true of all other Fidel labels: the "Lenin Ranch", the "Mao Tse-Tung" workers' housing unit, the "Chaplin" Theatre, the "Picasso" Hall, the "Free Algeria" sugarmill.

When you see a photograph or a film of a group of children, with their little fists closed, singing the communist Internationale anthem, think of the tragedy that each innocent little face represents, for each child has been snatched from his home, sent to far-off indoctrination centers or Marxist training camps. When the youths enter into this foreign training situation they are all perfectly normal children but later, when they are returned to Cuba, they have become mechanical instruments which only serve the forces of evil. I saw what happened to my poor little nephew, Fidelito.

My brother sent him to an indoctrination school in Moscow and, just a few months later, he had turned into a God-hating, militant, Communist Party member, his little head jammed with the same horrible ideas that fill Fidel's. It is because I have

Three Top Newsmen Accompany Castro's Sister

Three top Latin American newsmen were in Señorita Juanita Castro's party when she arrived in New Orleans to address the INCA Awards Dinner on January 18th.

There was Bernardo Viera, Sub-Director of the Spanish language newspaper magazine, BOHEMIA LIBRE, published weekly in three editions.

And also Augustin Alles, representative of A. T. P. (Agencia de Informaciones Periodísticas) the Latin American News Agency; here to cover the occasion for newspapers in the 20 free nations of Latin America.

And finally, acting as Señorita Castro's personal representative was Salvador Lew, roving TV and radio news correspondent with headquarters in Miami, who produces programs for use throughout Latin America.

The Associated Press, United Press International and the National Catholic Press Service filed feature stories on the Juanita Castro visit, which appeared in newspapers from Puerto Rico to San Francisco.

personally witnessed this abominable transformation that I harp so on this subject.

The degree of the drama that has been experienced by every person who was born in Cuba is infinitely greater than one would suppose. To try to recall each one of the atrocities inflicted on Cubans by Fidel and his communist followers would consume many days, perhaps months or even years. I have only wanted to take advantage of this opportunity to help to rectify some of the erroneous manufactured impressions that international communism continues to create throughout the world. Not everyone is fooled . . . but there are so many who are ignorant or who have been unwittingly convinced. I also hope that in bringing to light some of these very intimate family details, I have contributed in some way to the eventual solution of the tragic dilemma which confronts my country.

This has been but a rough sketch of the tragic destiny that has befallen a small but rich nation where every man used to work and live only to bring up a family according to established democratic and moral norms. Today that pattern has been broken, unfortunately, by a small group of men who have placed their sinister ambitions above their country, their families, their homes, and God.

I do hope that you have been able to understand me. Thank you very much.

1000 Cheer!

the ideals of democracy have been so forcefully demonstrated by her actions. And, no less would be their praise for the organization responsible for this program, the organization whose TRUTH TAPES are fighting Communism wherever and whenever men will stop and listen and rally to the democratic principles of liberty under law." Robertson praised the work of Robert R. Rainold who, as INCA Chief of Security, coordinated the plan of protection for Miss Castro. Over forty police officers and detectives from the New Orleans, Louisiana State and Jefferson Parish police departments participated in the machine smooth security operation.

INCA Awards Invitation Committee Chairman, Maurice Grundy, INCA treasurer, gave a statement of the financial status of the organization. Outlining INCA's fifty fold financial growth in just four years, Grundy said, "but the job has been done by too few. We need to broaden our base. We need more help, both numerically and financially, to do the vast job that is ahead of us"

"There is no price too great to pay for your freedom, there is no effort too large to guarantee freedom, not only for ourselves, but for our children and their children," Grundy said.

Headtable Sparkies

Honored with seats at Head table, in addition to those already named were Dr. James Allen, INCA Chief of Protocol; Col. Seymour Weiss, INCA Charter Member; Hon. James E. Fitzmorris, Councilman-at-Large; Manuel Gil and Louis M. Reese, INCA Production and Operations Managers; Richard T. Newman, INCA Secretary; Percival Stern, INCA Director; Salvador Lew, Administrative Representative for Señorita Castro; Ramiro Montalvo, a member of the Playa Giron Invasion brigade, and his wife, "Cuqui," who translated Señorita Castro's message into English.

Solemn Finale

The meeting was brought to a solemn conclusion by the Rev. Dr. J. D. Grey, Pastor of the First Baptist Church and member of the INCA Board, who said in the Benediction:

"Lord, God, of hosts, be with us yet, lest we forget—lest we forget. May this be a moment of serious and high dedication, the dedication of ourselves, our lives, our fortunes, our sacred honor, for the perpetuation of those principles that have made us a great, a strong, a free nation"

"We thank Thee for this courageous young woman who has touched our hearts tonight"

Then raising his head toward heaven Dr. Grey concluded:

"Give us the courage to help save ourselves."
