

---

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

---

This work would not have been possible but for the extensive cooperation of many people who gave generously of their time in interviews, made documentary evidence available, and corresponded at length with us. Many of those whose names appear in this book fall into this category, and as the protagonists in this case, they were able to obviate the speculation as to motives and reactions that has compromised the value of many trial studies written from dry records alone. In alphabetical order, they are William Alexander, Melvin M. Belli, Charles A. Bellows, A. D. Jim Bowie, Sam Brody, Dr. Walter Bromberg, Judge Joe B. Brown, Fred Bruner, Phil Burleson, Emmett Colvin, Jr., Sol Dann, Bill Decker, Robert B. Denson, Clayton Fowler, Elmer Gertz, Dr. Frederic A. Gibbs, Mrs. Eva Grant, Dr. Manfred S. Guttmacher, Tom Howard, Mrs. Eileen Kaminsky, Edward Linn, Dr. Roland Mackay, Maurice A. Melford, Alvin Moscow, Earl Ruby, Dr. Roy Schafer, Michael Shore, Hubert Winston Smith, Joe H. Tonahill, Henry M. Wade, Frank Watts, William Read Woodfield, James Zimmermann, and Tony Zoppi.

There are many others whose cooperation was extremely valuable, including newspaper reporters present at the trial, Dallas attorneys, and members of the jury.

We wish also to acknowledge the financial assistance of the Walter E. Meyer Research Institute of Law, Inc., of New Haven, Connecticut, which of course is in no way responsible for the contents of this book.

Finally, for their important help with the manuscript, we wish to thank Leon Stolz, Ross Edman and James B. Soble of Chicago and Marvin Singleton of Berkeley, California.

JOHN KAPLAN
JON R. WALTZ

Chicago, Illinois
May 3, 1965